SEIZE MAN WITH GUN AT WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (INS)—Secret Service agents seized a man in front of the White House today bearing a loaded gun. They said he was dressed in a war veteran's uniform and was discovered in the "Court of Freedom" directly in front of the executive mansion.

He was immediately rushed into the office of the District of Columbia police for questioning. The incident occurred while Mr. Roosevelt was at the Capitol taking his oath of office. Police declined to make the man's name public pending further inquiry. They described the weapon as a "pistol" and asserted it was fully loaded. Later it was announced that the man had been taken to Gallinger Hospital for examination by psychiatrists.

Off for Capitol

Leaping into the auto beside President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Falla, White House Scottie, attempted to be stowaway on trip to Capitol and third inaugural ceremonies for his master today. Falla was promptly ousted, and the drive to the Capitol began without further excitement.

JAM HAILS 3RD F. D. TERM

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, solemnly taking his third presidential oath beneath the Capitol's sunflecked dome, proclaimed to defense-minded Americans today that "our strong purpose is to protect and perpetuate the integrity of democracy."

Before a shivering crowd estimated by Capitol police at more than 75,000, the President stood bareheaded beside Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, placed his hand on a worn old Dutch family Bible and promised to "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution."

A mighty cheer went up from the multitude jamming the broad plaza. They kept up a deafening applause as Mr. Roosevelt stepped to the front of a white-pillared pavilion and began a brief inaugural address which was, in effect, a sermon on the glories of democracy.

Text of President Roosevelt's inaugural address on Page 20.

"Democracy is not dying," he said in measured tones. "We know it because we have seen it revive and grow.

DEMOCRACY'S PROOF

"We know it cannot die—because it is built on the unhampered initiative of individual men and women joined together in a common enterprise—an enterprise undertaken and carried through by the free expression of a free majority. * * *

"We know it because democracy alone has constructed an unlimited civilization capable of infinite progress in the improvement of human life."

Just before Mr. Roosevelt took his oath as the country's first third-term President, he sat attentively while John N. Garner, a smile creasing his ruddy face, swore in Henry A. Wallace of Iowa as his successor in the vice-presidency.

The chief executive counselled at the outset of his talk against risking "the real peril of inaction" and interpolated before this phrase the words "We risk the real peril of isolation."

KEEP THE FAITH

His words recalled to the audience his call for action eight years ago, at the time of his first inauguration, when a banking crisis faced the United States. He said:

"Most vital to our present and our future is this experience of a democracy which successfully survived crisis at home; put away many evil things; built new structures on enduring lines; and through it all, maintained the fact of its democracy."

He called for a continuation of "the spirit—the faith of America," saying:

"If we lose that sacred fire—if we let it be smothered with doubt and fear—then we shall reject the destiny which Washington strove so valiantly and so triumphantly to establish. The preservation of the spirit and faith of the nation does, and will, furnish the highest justification

HEAVY GUARD FOR F. D.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Police of the District of Columbia, augmented by 300 officers borrowed from New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, were on duty soon after dawn, heavily patroling the White House area and the parade route for inauguration day.

Two hours before the ceremonies began, the Capitol grounds were filled with men and women who huddled under blankets for protection against a raw wind. The first hardy few had been on hand since about 6 a. m. and many brought lunch boxes and bottles of steaming coffee.

MARINES ON DUTY

The grounds were patroled by 500 marines from the Quantico, Va., barracks, the collars of their heavy overcoats turned up around their ears.

The sun struck a big copy of the national seal emblazoned on the front of the President's white-colonaded platform. The Marine Band, resplendent in bright blue overcoats with trimmings of crimson and gold, assembled before the platform for a pre-inaugural concert.

The first woman to arrive in the reserved seats, pine planks set in rows across the plaza, was Mrs. J. Edward Burns of Kansas City.

MASS BEHIND ROPES

Those without coveted tickets to the temporary seats massed behind police ropes to the rear of the Capitol plaza or squatted on the lawn.

At 10:32 a. m., Mr. Roosevelt and members of his family left the White House and drove around Lafayette Square just opposite to St. John's Church for the special ser-

F. D. Begins His Big Day By Routine

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—President Roosevelt started off the historic day of his third inauguration in routine fashion, with breakfast in bed, and a quick glance at the morning newspapers.

He awakened at 8:30, White House officials said, and, as is his usual custom, had his breakfast and read the papers in his second-floor room in the executive mansion.

Mr. Roosevelt shaved himself before dressing to attend divine services at St. John's Episcopal church, across Lafayette sq. from the White House.

New Super-Fighter, Spitfire III, to Be Used by Britain

LONDON, Jan. 20 (INS)—Capable of a speed far in excess of 400 miles an hour, a new super-fighter—the Spitfire III—will take to the air this spring, authoritative British military quarters disclosed today.

Described as the "deadliest fighter ever developed," the new plane carries a heavy armament of machine guns and cannon. Powered by a Rolls-Royce Merlin motor, the fighter will be able to operate at greater altitude than any combat plane now in action, it was claimed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Justice William O. Douglas was prevented today by "a mild attack of influenza" from attending a session of the Supreme Court and the inauguration of President Roosevelt.

Hitler, Duce Meet, Plot Way To Block British Eire Coup

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Jan. 20—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini met today for their "last conference before the war's climax" as informed German quarters predicted early British occupation of Eire.

This was the first time Berlin had spoken openly of any such planned coup by Britain. Germany justified her invasions of Denmark, Norway and the Lowlands on the grounds Britain had planned similar violations of neutrality to strike at the Reich. The influential Nazi newspaper Vreme of Belgrade today termed the Hitler-Mussolini conference their "final meeting prior to invasion of England."—Editor's note.

The meeting took place amid a secrecy far exceeding that which has surrounded pervious consultations between the two dictators.

The communique merely stated that the dictators, meeting in the spirit of Axis friendship and solidarity, had reaffirmed their complete unanimity of views on all questions.

TENSION WITH U. S.

Well-informed observers, however, linked to the meeting the following facts or suppositions:

1—Britain is only awaiting passage of President Roosevelt's lend-lease bill before moving into Eire.

2—German-American relations have been reduced to the lowest ebb in recent history, climaxed by the San Francisco swastika incident.

3—Operation of British warships in the Western Hemisphere with the tacit consent of Washington requires most careful analysis of the situation, with particular attention to the tripartite pact linking Germany, Japan and Italy.

In general, one commentator observed, the outlook now that Hitler and Mussolini have met again may be summed up as follows:

First, the Axis powers as on each previous occasion before a major blow have reached full agreement on the steps to be taken.

Second, England is doomed and an Italo-German victory is merely a matter of timing and military procedure.

DISCUSS FAR EAST

Third, the United States cannot prevent this defeat or succeed in extending the European war.

Fourth, the Reich stands by its policy of refusing to allow itself to be provoked into hostilities in the Western Hemisphere.

BRITISH-AID FOES FOR OUTRIGHT GIFT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Countering Wendell L. Willkie's renewed endorsement of the salient points in President Roosevelt's aid-to-Britain bill, opposition senators talked today of introducing a substitute measure for an outright gift to the British of $1,000,000,000 or $2,000,000,000.

Indications that this "gift" strategy would be employed in the determined fight for defeat of the lease-lend legislation served notice that inauguration day signified no armistice in the developing legislative contest.

Discussion of the substitute proposal was heard after Willkie met with President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull yesterday in a flying visit to the capital before his transatlantic Clipper trip to survey conditions in England at first hand.

From Mr. Roosevelt Willkie received a penned note to Prime Minister Churchill. The message, carrying the greeting "Dear Churchill," said that the 1940 Republican nominee for President was trying to keep politics out of the American defense program. It also expressed the wish that Britain would weather the storm of war.

Willkie said that his conferences with the President and Hull were "very pleasant" and added that they had "extended every courtesy" for his forthcoming trip.

Despite the adjournment of Congress for the inauguration, the House leadership considered ways to hasten action on the aid-to-Britain legislation. White House lieutenants were hopeful that the Foreign Affairs Committee would wind up public hearings by the end of this week and send the measure to the floor next Monday or so.

98-Pound Wife Has Quads-3 Girls, 1 Boy

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Jan. 20(AP)—Quadruplets were born today to Mrs. Eva Swanson, 35-year-old 98-pound wife who was previously childless, but one of the babes died shortly after 11 a. m. in St. Anthony's Hosiptal. It was the last born, a girl.

Hospital attendants announced the death. Only a few minutes before the attending physician, Dr. R. A. Gilmore, had told reporters that the last born, was "not in very good condition" and was having difficulty breathing.

There were three girls and a boy born by caesarian operation.

The doctor said that Mrs. Swanson, only 4 feet, 11 inches tall, was "fine."

TOO SLEEPY

The name selected by the parents for the baby that died was Linda. The husband and father, Melbert O. Swanson, 32, a clerk in a foundry, said the others would be named Jennifer, Phoebe and Stephen. Linda lived about 90 minutes.

Shortly after the births the father told reporters he had been expecting the quadruplets for some time and was "too sleepy to be excited."

Dr. Gilmore said feeding of the babies would begin in about 13 hours and that they would be given mother's milk with an eye dropper. He said they were all "full time" babies and would probably remain in the incubators about a month.

It was a big day for Dr. Gilmore. He had planned to rest last night but was called at 3 a. m. today and at 3:30 a. m. delivered another baby in the same hospital.

The hospital for convenience named the babies "Swanson one, two, three and four." They were placed immediately in incubators and given oxygen.

WEIGHTS ANNOUNCED

The hospital announced the weights as follows:

"Swanson One," 2 pounds, 7 ounces; "Swanson Two," the boy 2 pounds, 9 ounces; "Swanson Three," 2 pounds, 3¼ ounces, and "Swanson Four," 2 pounds 4 ounces.

The infants were given numbered arm bands.

Mrs. Swanson was given an anesthetic at 9:20 a. m. and the physicians said all four babies were delivered by 9:30 a. m. A surgeon and two assistants performed the operation, with five other doctors assisting.

DOCTOR EXCITED

Dr. Gilmore said the operation, which took 30 minutes in all, was "very, very successful."

"He said Mrs. Swanson was "very, very happy when I told her she was the mother of two boys and two girls. I was wrong about that and I'll have to go back and tell her that she is the mother of three girls and one boy, instead. I guess I was a little excited."

Incubators were supplied by the Indiana State Board of Health. Dr. Gilmore said a physician on the board of health told him these were the first quadruplets born in Indiana. Medical authorities said quadruplet births occur only 179 times in 120,000,000 births.

Dr. Gilmore said the diagnosis that quadruplets were expected was made as early as last November and confirmed by an X-ray specialist.

TWINS IN FAMILY

Mrs. Swanson was given a blood transfusion during the operation by George Segnitz of Michigan City and another thereafter by Vernon Swanson, her brother-in-law. She herself weighed 5½ pounds when she was born.

Her husband has a twin sister and two uncles on his mother's side were fathers of twins.

Mrs. Swanson, who is four feet, 11 inches tall, was given blood transfusions yesterday in an effort to strengthen her for the operation. Blood tests were taken of eight persons to insure further transfusions if necessary.

Her first confinement.

Mrs. Swanson was married four years ago

"I'M GOING TO LOSE 20 POUNDS"

By MARY X. SULLIVAN

Well, here we go on the second lap of my reducing marathon.

When my alarm clock screamed at me this morning, I felt like a worm. Not a skinny worm, but one of those repulsive fat ones. Because I weakened over the week-end. (Omigosh.)

But it turned out all right. I didn't sabotage my whole week's work, much to my surprised delight.

Saturday night I had guests in my rabbit-hutch, after I had eaten a substantial dinner. I was as good as gold until after midnight, when I suddenly was ravenous, and I pitched into a plate of scrambled eggs and bacon.

MARY X. SULLIVAN TAKES TO THE BARS

WEEK-END AT HOME

Sunday I went home to the bosom of my family. There's nothing like your own family, especially if you're Irish, for keeping you from any delusions of grandeur. To put it mildly, they are skeptical. (I've tried to explain that the reason I concentrate on my groceries at home is because I eat in restaurants all week, but they just laugh.)

Anyhoo . . . I couldn't resist a baked potato with my roast pork, nor could I pass up that brown gravy. And Sunday night I found myself saying:

"I'm going to have just a sliver of that apple pie. Oh, that's too big. Well, never mind, it's cut now." You know how it is.

Such a remorseful night as I spent. I looked fat, I felt fat. I knew I had put back the three and a fraction pounds I had lost. All night I dreamed I was being chased by photographers who were taking pictures that looked like Kate Smith.

PROVES POINT

This morning I did my exercises with frantic fervor, roasted to a turn in the hot box, and submitted meekly to Mrs. Alexander's iron-fingered administrations (with a scolding thrown in). And was I re-

LEAP SURVIVOR MOURNS 'OTHER' WOMAN'S DEATH

A crippled Chelsea woman and a seriously ill Canton war veteran, both of them long hospitalized, today faced insurmountable tragedy in betrayal by their mates.

The wife of one met instant death beneath a roaring New York subway train, while the husband of the other—partners in a "suicide-elopement"—was near death in New York's Bellevue Hospital.

The couple, who found previous marriage ties and a difference in religion too much to bear, were Mrs. Carrie Hartwell Patterson, 26, of Pleasant st., Canton, and Israel Hurwitz, 38, of Chestnut st., Chelsea.

They spent their last two nickels for a subway ride and with locked arms leaped before an onrushing train.

KILLED INSTANTLY

Mrs. Patterson, mother of three children, was killed instantly while Hurwitz, following amputation of his left leg, was given scant chance for recovery.

Those who heard the news from hospital cots were Oscar Patterson, army veteran, who has been critically ill for more than a year at Norfolk County Hospital in Braintree, and the wife of Hurwitz, Mrs. Fannie Hurwitz, who has been crippled, authorities said, since an automobile injury four years ago.

Relatives of the dead woman claimed her body and announced burial will be in Belfast, Me., where her three children have lived since their dad was hospitalized. They are Everett, 11, Eugenia, 10, and Anne May, 7.

Hurwitz's wife is in an undisclosed Boston institution, it was said by his relatives in Chelsea and Brookline. Whether or not he has any children, both he and they refused to say.

The clandestine love, that grew while their mates were in hospitals, led the couple to New York last Friday. For three days, they sought new happiness until hopeless love became the victor.

PAIR PENNILESS

Penniless, save for their "last ride" nickels, they locked arms and jumped in front of a four-car express train. Although the woman was killed instantly, Hurwitz miraculously escaped death despite the fact that three cars and part of a fourth passed over him.

Hurwitz's eyeglasses, unbroken, were still in place, and he, dazed but conscious, still clasped the broken, lifeless body of Mrs. Patterson in his arms when police and subway guards reached them.

The story of their death embrace on the station platform and their leap was dramatically told by George Durning, motorman of the train in front of which they leaped.

"As the train came into the platform," Durning said, "they both stooped their heads and kept them down as they ran together to the edge of the platform and jumped. Their arms were locked about each other and she landed on top of him as they turned over and fell in front of the train. Three cars passed over the man part of the fourth before I could stop the train."

STILL ALIVE

Durning ran with the guards to the tracks and was amazed to see Hurwitz not only alive but conscious, and talking.

"I hope she's dead," were his first words, then he added, "I didn't think I was that strong. I have nothing to live for. I'll tell you nothing."

After taking morphine to allay pain of the dismemberment, Hurwitz calmly smoked a cigarette and discussed his ill-starred romance.

"We were deeply in love but too many obstacles stood in our path," he said. "There were her husband and children, and my wife, Fannie, crippled for four years, and we had no money.

"We got here Saturday from Canton. We hitch-hiked part of the way and stayed last night in a rooming house on 14th st. We stayed awake all night trying to figure out what to do."

Fall, Pneumonia Victim, Is Better

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Jan. 20 (AP)—The condition of Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, who was stricken with bronchial pneumonia several days ago, was reported by attaches at the U. S. Veterans Hospital today as "much improved."

The 78-year-old former New Mexico senator has been a patient at the hospital since last fall.

YD CONVOY—Gordon Quen and James Spurling of the 101st Division, start via truck for Camp Edwards.

EN ROUTE TO CAMP—Big job of transporting supplies and men from Boston to Camp Edwards on the Cape gets underway today . . . and here is one of the long truck convoys hitting the high spots on Route 138 at Canton. NAZI FLAG ROW PAIR FREE ON LEGION WRIT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Renewed, although unofficial, German demands for satisfaction today raised the question of whether the State Department would go beyond its written expression of regret over the destruction of the German consulate's swastika flag in San Francisco.

The State Department expressed its regrets over the incident yesterday in response to a protest from the German embassy. Hours later authorized sources in Berlin announced that the German charge d'affaires here had been instructed to ask punishment of the two men arrested in the case, as well as assurances that the consulate would be permitted to fly the flag.

There was some speculation that the authorized sources were unaware of the note the State Department already had sent. This note was not an apology because, diplomats here explained, governments customarily do not apologize formally for acts which they attribute to individuals.

In the meantime two United States naval enlisted men arrested by San Francisco police on malicious mischief charges in connection with the case were released from jail on a writ of habeas corpus obtained by two American Legion officials.

The Legionnaires argued that, instead of being punished, the pair should be commended for preventing violation of the military and veterans' code of California. The code makes it a felony to display any emblem which is an "invitation or a stimulus to anarchistic action or as an aid to propaganda of any organization that advocates the overthrow of this government."

The Navy said today the two men involved lately had been "under observation in the psychopathic ward" of the naval hospital on Mare Island, Cal. They were at liberty from the hospital, it was said, at the time of the incident.

FEARED RIOT

One of the men arrested, Harold J. Sturtevant, 22, of Haverhill, Mass., said last night he might not have ripped the flag from its pole Saturday if he had known it had been placed there by a consulate. He explained he wanted to head off what looked to him like an impending riot by the crowd which gathered after the flag was unfurled.

Lloyd George's Wife Dead at 75

LONDON, Jan. 20 (TP—Dame Margaret Lloyd George, wife of Britain's World War prime minister, died today at Criccieth, Wales.

She was more than 75 years of age and a native of Criccieth.

David Lloyd George, whom she married in 1888, had left Churt, their country home in Surrey, to be at the bedside but it was believed he was detained in the Midlands and could not reach Criccieth before her death.

SECOND SECTION OF YD ROLLS TO CAPE CAMP

In the second movement of the Yankee Division to Camp Edwards, a long train of 95 trucks and vehicles rolled over the roads today, carrying 38 officers, 350 men and equipment and material for the training tour of at least a year.

Participating in today's troop movement following the Sunday layoff were the 101st Quartermaster Regiment from Newton, the 26th Military Police company from Charlestown and the advance detachment of special troops from Commonwealth Armory.

ESCORT OF TROOPERS

These three motor units converged at the junction of Routes 128 and 138, south of Boston, and from there went down to the camp at North Falmouth in a long train, led and escorted by State troopers and arriving in early afternoon.

In daily convoys, a total of 511 vehicles, 188 officers and 3037 men will be moved over the road to camp this week.

The bulk of the 26th Division's manpower will be transported by rail. The railroad movement of the division, less motor elements, is scheduled to start next Thursday and will continue until completion on the 28th.

Today's motor train was commanded on the road by Maj. Henry O'Brien, and the movement started at 10 a. m.

Every truck in the regiment had been loaded hours before at Framingham, the assembly point, according to Col. Edward J. Ryan, regimental commander.

In the machines piled high were desks, files, and other office equipment, as well as barrack bags, photographs of mother and the best girl.

Meanwhile, officers and men of the 101st Infantry of the 26th were preparing to leave for Camp Edwards, Thursday.

Some 1500 members of the regiment, Boston's own, presented an impressive picture as they marched to military mass at Holy Cross and later proceeded to Copley Plaza for a communion breakfast.

As scores of sons of officers and men listened proudly from a balcony above the ballroom, Col. Paul G. Kirk solemnly pledged that the regiment would carry on the traditions which have won for it the highest honors in U. S. military history.

CLEAN REGIMENT

Speaking of the selectees who will soon join the regiment, Col. Kirk said:

"We must impress upon them the character of our regiment, a regiment which always has and always will observe religion—a regiment of clean-thinking, clean-living Christian men."

The need for religion was also stressed by Bishop Richard J. Cushing, who declared it was an inspiring sight to see such a group of soldiers "while preparing to answer the call of their country, kneeling at the altar of God from whom all authority comes.

"Follow the leadership of Christ," he urged, "and you will have a clear idea of the State and your duty to the State." To illustrate his meaning, Bishop Cushing quoted the parable "Render unto Caesar . . ."

Colder, Clear Is Forecast

Continuing the cold wave, the mercury is expected to drop to around 10 degrees in Boston tonight and to a low of 4 to 8 degrees in communities inland.

This forecast for "fair, continued cold tonight and Tuesday," followed a low of 14 degrees during last night.

Today's dazzling sunshine was a deceiving factor. What warmth it might have brought was dispelled by a 20-27 mile strong, gusty northwest wind sweeping the city and clocked at 92 miles an hour atop Mt. Washington, where the temperature was 18 below .

The weather bureau issued a warning to small craft at sea between Block Island and Eastport, Me.

Low temperatures today gave Pittsfield 5 degrees, Portland 2, Concord, N. H., 8; Westfield 10.

Although a slight rise of temperature during the early morning lifted the mercury to around 20 degrees, forecasters said New England will experience sub-freezing conditions and brisk north winds for several days.

Stalled automombiles and steaming radiators plagued motorists who had not prepared for the sudden drop from unseasonal warmth. Early Sunday a temperature of 38 was recorded in Boston, but the mercury fell 20 degrees in a few hours.

CHURCH ON FIRE AT FUNERAL MASS

In the midst of a funeral mass in the upper part of St. Thomas' Church, South st., Jamaica Plain, a two-alarm fire swept the lower church today, causing damage estimated at $5000.

More than 200 mourners were slowly ushered from the smoke-filled edifice after the casket of the deceased, Miss Sadie Pugh of Arborway ct., had been wheeled to the rear.

Without indicating that he noticed anything amiss, the Rt. Rev. Monsignor William J. Casey, pastor of the church and celebrant of the solemn high mass of requiem, calmly continued to the end.

Assisting him were the Rev. Maurice Flynn and the Rev. John L. Parsons. Altar boys followed the example of their priests in serving out the mass.

As the church was being emptied by direction of the undertaker's assistants and the smoke became more dense, the soloists, Mrs. Anna Lewis and Frank McAuliffe, moved from the choir loft to the altar.

There they continued chanting the responses to the clergymen's prayers. Mrs. Ida McCarthy O'Shea, the organist, remained at her post.

The fire in the basement church was being fought, meanwhile. Flames were confined to the walls and ceiling of the left central part. None of the sacred vessels had to be moved as tabernacles in both upper and lower churches are fireproof.

Large crowds had gathered outside with arrival of firemen, and traffic on South and Centre sts. including buses and trolley cars, had to be rerouted for nearly an hour.

When the flames were extinguished, Monsignor Casey motored to Old Calvary cemetery, Mattapan, to read committal prayers for the deceased.

Fire Chief Samuel Pope said that the cause of the fire was as yet undetermined, but that it had apparently started in one of the confessionals.

$5000 CHURCH FIRE—While more than 200 mourners attended the high mass of requiem for Sadie M. Pugh of Jamaicalain at St. Thomas' Church, a fire swept the lower section, filling the church with dense smoke and causing $5000 damage. The priests continued the mass as the mourners were ietly ushered from the church.

OLGA ROGERS BOTTOMS
Wins Custody of Son

Mother Is Given Custody of Son

SALEM, Jan. 20—Judge John V. Phelan, in probate court today, awarded to the mother guardianship and custody of Edward Carlz, six, unwitting foil in a tear-bathed battle waged between the mother and the aunt to whom she gave the child when two weeks old.

But Judge Edward Morley of Gloucester, counsel for the aunt, Mrs. Manuel J. Carlz of Taylor st., Gloucester, immediately filed a claim of appeal and a motion for stay of proceedings supreme court decision.

The mother, Mrs. Olga Rogers Bottoms, 24, who herself was brought up by the aunt after being orphaned in babyhood, sought to revoke a decree under which Edward was adopted by Mrs. Carlz.

Unmarried then, according to testimony, but now the wife of Benjamin A. Bottoms, radioman at the Salem Coast Guard station, she testified that since last July the aunt has refused to allow her to see her son.

She has had two children since her marriage to Bottoms, but both died shortly after birth.

Saltonstall at Defense Parley

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Defense, Army and Navy chiefs in a five-hour session which ended early today appealed to 26 governors to help speed up production of materials for national defense and aid to Britain.

Behind closed doors the governors were told that the nation faced a crisis.

After the conference Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, remarked there was "general accord and unanimity."

Governor Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts said one of the chief subjects discussed was the "farming out" of sub-contracts and bringing smaller manufacturers more actively into the defense production program.

Hundreds of Adults Seeking NYA Jobs

Hundreds of adults swarming daily into the National Youth Administration office in Park Square Building in search of employment led State Administrator John L. Donovan, Jr., to repeat today that his office handles only the work problems of youth.

"We have money and jobs for youth between 17 and 24, inclusive. I sympathize with the adults seeking work but I have no jobs for them," he said.

Bride Attack Suspect Held

First admitting his guilt, then changing his plea, Gerald McCarthy, 20, of Somerville, was held in $30,000 for the Middlesex grand jury today on charges of kidnaping and attacking a young Cambridge bride.

He pleaded innocence on four other counts of assault, breaking and entering and carrying a gun, and total bail was set at $40,000. Arraigned with McCarthy in East Cambridge court was Lloyd A. Simmons, 19, of Cambridge. He was held in $10,000 on an attempted breaking and entering charge.

McCarthy's alleged victim in the kidnap-attack was Mrs. Jeanne Earle, 21, wife of a Harvard Law School student. Police charge that McCarthy was a member of a gang of six and are still seeking others.

Oil Floods Street in Crash

Eliot sq., Roxbury, was partly flooded with fuel oil today, endangering pedestrians and motor traffic, after a Boston Elevated car was in collision with an oil truck of the Colonial Coal Co., Roxbury.

Firemen from Engine 14 spread sand to eliminate fire hazard. Passengers in the car were shaken up.

The Elevated car, in-bound from Jamaica Plain to Dudley st., was operated by Frederick E. Fay of Prospect st., West Roxbury. It was proceeding into the square when the oil truck, operated by Michael Navaror of Cottage st., East Boston, came out of Bartlett st.

Windows in the car were smashed and the left front door broken. The left rear of the truck was damaged.

PAIR LIVE WITH DEAD KIN 3 MONTHS

CAMDEN, N. J., Jan. 20 (AP)—Two sisters, who patrolman John Toal said apparently were unaware a third sister had died and who lived in the house with the body for three months, were cared for today by welfare authorities.

The dead woman was identified as Miss Jennie Miller, 63, and County Coroner Harry Leonard said she died last October.

Toal discovered the body, covered with overcoats, quilts and blankets, in a bed in a second-floor bedroom. He had gone to the home to investigate after finding one of the sisters, Rebecca, 55, wandering in the streets. When he asked Rebacca and the other sister, Maragret, 60, if anyone else lived in the house, he said he was told:

"Oh, yes, we have another sister in the bedroom upstairs, but she has been sick a long time and she may be dead."

Leonard reported he had found bank books in the house indicating the sisters had more than $2000 in savings accounts in 1931 and 1932. Small amounts of money were scattered about the drably furnished rooms, he said.

2 CRUISERS SUNK, DUCE NOW SAYS

ROME, Jan. 20 (AP)—Stefani, the official Italian news agency, said today Italian authorities had learned two British cruisers were sunk in the air attack in the straits of Sicily 10 days ago, instead of only one.

The first cruiser was hit by Italian dive-bombers southeast of Pantellaria Island Jan. 10, and the second by German bombers east of Malta the next day, Stefani said.

The ships were of the same type, the agency added, and therefore it was impossible to ascertain which was the Southampton, whose loss was announced by the British admiralty last week.

It was in the same fighting that the Italians claimed to have damaged the big British aircraft carrier Illustrious, which since has been reported hit in two German dive-bombing attacks on Valletta, Malta.

German dive-bombers sank a merchantman in the harbor at Valletta, Malta, yesterday during the same attack in which the Illustrious was hit, the Italian high command said today.

Southampton Raked by Bombs

LONDON, Jan. 20 (AP)—The port of Southampton was one of the cities in southern England bombed last night by German raiders, it was disclosed here today, but casualties and damage were reported to have been light.

The raiders also attacked southeastern England and the London area, but were handicapped by thick weather over the English Channel.

Planes were reported in the vicinity of South Wales, western England and East Anglia at times during the morning.

Five German bombers were said officially to have been shot down last night during the Nazi raids. Four of them were listed as downed by anti-aircraft fire.

A government communique on Nazi raids declared "damage was caused by high explosive bombs at some places, but nowhere was it on a heavy scale." Casualties were believed to have been light.

Planes were over the London area for seven hours until an all-clear two hours after midnight, but few bombs were dropped.

British in Eritrea Pursuing Italians

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 20 (AP)—British forces, in pursuit of Italians falling back from the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, have pushed into Eritrea at two points, British headquarters announced today.

Striking beyond Kassala, on the Sudan side of the border, from which the Italians were reported driven yesterday with the aid of Ethiopian irregulars, the British said they were "now operating eastward" of Tessenei and Sabderat "in contact with the retreating enemy."

INSIDE ERITREA

Sabderat is on the border about 20 miles east of Kassala and Tessenei, about 30 miles southeast of the recaptured town, is several miles inside Eritrea.

"Localities about Sabderat and Tessenei, which the Italians have strongly fortified, were yesterday occupied without opposition by our troops," the war bulletin said.

If the British have taken Tessenei and have pushed beyond it to the east, they apparently are driving down the valley of the River Gash which flows into the Red Sea at the Eritrean port of Massaua, which an RAF communique said was twice raided Saturday night. Tessenei is a rail head and center of a cotton-growing region.

The Fascist flight was said to be general all along the 200-mile Sudanese border front.

London military circles claimed two Italian divisions, including two Blackshirt battalions, had been routed in actions around Kassala. The Italians were said to have suffered 2000 casualties.

British occupation of the town was described in these circles as the "successful climax of the war of maneuver carried out by numerically inferior forces against an enemy very well armed and equipped.—Editor's note.

Kassala, only 15 miles from the border of Italian Eritrea, had been in Italian hands since last July and was the last Anglo-Egyptian Sudan city held by Fascist forces. They were said to have abandoned the sprawling city of 20,000 almost without firing a shot.

In the Mediterranean, German dive-bombers struck twice at the harbor area of Valletta, Malta, during the week-end and the British said "at least" 15 raiders were shot down in Sunday's heavy raid, while one British fighter was reported missing. They said civilian property suffered "extensive damage."

There was no mention by the British of the German claim to have raided the Suez Canal Zone.

Several planes of undetermined nationality made the first night raid of the war on British-mandated Palestine during the week-end also, but there were no reports of casualties or damage, although several bombs were dropped during a 20-minute alert.

'QUAKES ROCK PALESTINE

JERUSALEM, Jan. 20 (AP)—Palestine was shaken by two series of fairly strong earth tremors early today, the first, in the northern section, beginning at 6:30 a. m., and the second, felt throughout the south, at 7:20 a. m.

EIRE VULNERABLE IF NAZIS ATTACK

Staff Writer Austen Lake, who knows Ireland like the back of his hand, points out in this series the grave danger to Eire in her great Shannon power development if Hitler turns his fury loose on the island. Germans built the power system that provides most of Ireland with electricity.

By AUSTEN LAKE

This is a dismal, gloom-laden prophecy for Ireland, but a deduction as simple as ABC. If war comes to the 26 counties of Eire, German Nazidom can, and will, paralyze 90 per cent of Irish industry with a swift, single stroke.

For Eire, in its Shannon hydro-electric station near Limerick, has an Achilles heel, a vulnerable nerve center which supplies virtually all of Irish power and which German labor and German technical brains created a dozen years ago.

Berlin archives have the exact location, the plant secrets and blue prints and the strategical information of the Shannon plant's value to Ireland. In case of war Luftwaffe bombers would promptly visit Adnacousha, the little village where the station lies, unload their lethal eggs on the narrow water gut, blast the concrete face of the generator dam, disintegrate the long spillway and leave most of Irish wheelsidle, its tramways motionless, its houses and buildings dark, its factories paralyzed.

RUIN INEVITABLE

If war comes to Ireland the Shannon's ruin is almost inevitable. Dublin knows that Eire's tiny, though competent airforce, and its small anti-aircraft unit, could hardly cope with the crushing might of Nazi vultures.

That's the sad prophecy. This is the pleasant picture!

Two miles east of Limerick the diverted waters of the Shannon electric station come boiling and whooping through the dam face to rejoin the emaciated mother stream. They come from a rocky gut with a sense of outrage as spanked children rush toward maternal comfort and the familiar family grooves.

And presently the fuming waters become reconciled in a wide and misty river which runs past Limerick as though painted on silk. Barefoot boys float wooden splinters along the shores, swimming swans leave radiating ripples, old men doze over their fishpoles. Right now! Its a pleasant pastoral scene, remote from war, ruin and agony.

So you go past the ancient walls of King John's castle where moss dribbles over the bastions and there are tell-tale patches of brick where the Williamites shot cannon holes in the masonry (1691)—and so to the village og Adnacousha.

At Tay-Pay Sullivan's ale-tap ("Guiness is good for you") you swing sharply left and continue till you reach a broad canal that is straight as a rifle shot and disappears into a horizon haze.

LOCKS ALONG WAY

It is seven miles along this man-made waterway to the natural course of Mother Shannon and 30 more to Lough Dern and the channels of the Northern lakes. And that is Eire's vital, but vulnerable inland water artery.

There are boat locks to step the barges over the rise of the great concrete apron which spreads acros the face of the canal, and black turbine tubes which spout the waters through electric generators in the power station—a high, bleak building which looks like a Tibetan lamasery with its square windows, tier above tier.

So here, the Nazis know, is the nerve centre of Eire, whence electric energy flows in concentric circles of pylons and high-tension lines to the four corners of the country—northwest as far as Ballina in the County Mayo, northeast to Dundalk in County Lough; southeast to Wexford and southwest to Dunmanway, County Cork.

From Adnacousha, as from an electric brain, the nervous impulses fly across the central plains of the Golden Vale where fat farms flourish and Irish thoroughbreds train, over the Kerry crags past early Christian ruins, along the fishing slopes of Galway and to the cities of Athlone, Roscommon, Dublin, Dundalk, Kildare, Kilkenny, Waterford, Cork, etc.

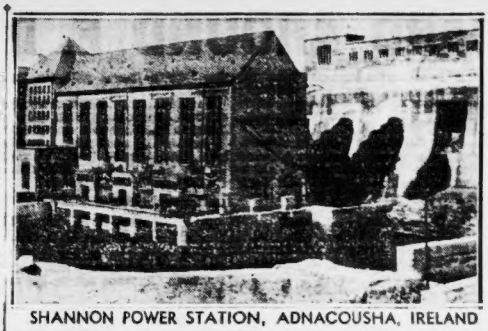
It is a dozen years since I first stood at the site of the Shannon scheme, as it neared completion and was as much the topic of Irish table talk as the question of the British land annuities, partition, and the political struggle between William Cosgrave's Fine Gael and Eamon de Valera's Fianna Fail parties.

A small army of German engineers and technical laborers were preparing to desert their wooden hutments and dismantle the Krupp-made steam shovels and cranes for shipment to Berlin.

It was a German unit from top to toe—German supplies, commissary, language, equipment, customs—a portable hamlet as Teuton in character as a Richard Wagner Opera.. German wives cooked wienerschnitzel for German husbands. German children, blond and sturdy, sported in the door yards. Mathematical German thoroughness was evidenced even in the flower beds and whitewashed, latticed fences.

Germany was in the throes of civil disunion then. There was no Hitler, no National Socialist party, no anti-Semitic movement, no world aggression. So, at the moment, these Germans were merely workaday, technically able folk who could, and did, the job better and for less than competing American and British firms.

So, about 1930, they picked up the last of their gear, packed their household traps and went home, turning the plant over to such young Irish technicians as George Webster of Galway University and his staff of Irish experts. There are about 3000 persons employed throughout the system, including trouble-shooting crews, accountants, collectors and various substation hands.



SHANNON POWER STATION, ADNACOUSHA, IRELAND

In tomorrow's article Austen Lake discusses "a situation tailor-made for the savage cunning of Hitler."

Colds Have Launched A "BLITZKRIEG"!!

Watch Out For Your Family!

NOW with epidemic colds spreading their misery—be careful, be as careful as you can. Do everything possible to help safeguard your family against the "blitzkrieg". There are certain time-tested precautions you can take that may save you and yours a great deal of sickness, worry and expense.

First of all, get plenty of rest, good sound sleep. Eat simple but nourishing food—vegetables and fresh fruits if available. Drink plenty of water and keep elimination regular. Take some exercise every day—preferably outdoors in clean, fresh air. Then let trustworthy Vicks help you.

Use These Two Time-Tested Treatments Whenever Needed

To Help Prevent Many Colds from Developing

At the first sniffle, sneeze or sign of nasal irritation—put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril right away. This helps to prevent many colds from developing. Because Va-tro-nol is expressly designed to help your natural defenses against colds in the nose and upper throat where most colds start.

NOTE: If by chance you have a head cold, a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up both sides of the nose should quickly relieve misery. It helps soothe irritation, shrink swollen membranes and clear out mucus-clogged nasal passages. As a result it makes breathing freer and easier and brings you comfort.

TIME-TESTED VICKS VA-TRO-NOL

To Quickly Relieve Miseries of Developed Colds

When a cold gets by all precautions and causes muscular soreness or tightness, spells of coughing or irritation in the upper bronchial tubes, relieve such misery the improved Vicks way—with a 3-minute VapoRub Massage.

Massage VapoRub for 3 minutes on IMPORTANT RIB-AREA OF BACK as well as throat and chest. Spread a thick layer over chest and cover up. This more thorough treatment actually increases the important STIMULATING-POULTICE action and PENETRATING-VAPOR action of VapoRub. And makes this famous old family standby work faster and longer to relieve distress of colds.

TIME-TESTED VICKS VAPORUB

REMEMBER THIS... Both Va-tro-nol and VapoRub have been thoroughly tested through years of constant use in millions of homes. If the miserable symptoms of the cold are not relieved promptly—or if more serious trouble seems to threaten—call in your family physician right away.

HEAVY GUARD AROUND F. D.

vice he has made an inaugural custom.

Accompanying notables filled a cavalcade of 16 automobiles. More than that number of uniformed motorcycle police accompanied the cars.

JAMES WITH FATHER

The President, in a black cutaway coat and top hat, drove in an open car, accompanied by his wife and 87-year-old mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, and son James.

A few minutes before Mr. Roosevelt reached the church, Wallace and Mrs. Wallace arrived with a party including Speaker Rayburn and Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader. John N. Garner, the retiring Vice-President; cabinet members and other high officials were in their pews awaiting the President.

Mrs. Roosevelt wore an American redwood dress beneath a black broad-tailed coat trimmed in sable and a black beret-effect hat with a gray feather. Mrs. Sara Roosevelt was in black fur coat. Both carried huge bouquets of violets.

Among the White House guests was Crown Princess Martha of Norway, who is living in a nearby suburban estate.

Mr. Roosevelt sat next to the asile in the second pew of the church. The first pew was unoccupied. Next to the President was his wife, then his mother, with Wallace, Mrs. Wallace and Garner in the same pew.

ASKS DIVINE GUIDANCE

The service, in which the President joined, asked divine guidance "for our country," "for the President of the United States and all in civil authority," "for social justice," and "for the family of nations."

"Almighty God, our heavenly father," read one prayer, "guide, we beseech thee, the nations of the world into the way of justice and truth, and establish among them that peace which is the fruit of righteousness, that they may become the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."

After the services, the President left the church on James' arm, bareheaded and without an overcoat, pausing to chat with the three officiating clergymen while a crowd behind ropes cheered and photographers snapped pictures.

"Good boy, Frankie," someone yelled as the Chief Executive reentered his car. His mother this time got in a closed car, but Mrs. Roosevelt and James returned to the White House with the President.

As she came down a short flight of stairs from the church, the First Lady tripped but was caught quickly before she could fall. A moment later she darted back to shake hands with Garner. Mrs. Garner was at their Texas home.

UNDER HEAVY GUARD

Mr. Roosevelt left the White House for the Capitol at 11:40 a. m. Riding with him in his open car were Speaker Rayburn and Senator Barkley. Rayburn sat in the middle.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt followed in the second car; Garner was in the next car and Wallace and Mrs. Wallace came next.

A wedge of motorcycle policemen preceded the White House entourage, their apex in the center of Pennsylvania ave. and ends brushing almost to the ropes.

Four Army trucks armed with anti-aircraft machine-guns paralelled the Presidential procession.

Thousands along the parade route stamped and shouted as the President rode by, waving his high silk hat merrily in spite of the cold breezes disarraying his hair.

Mr. Roosevelt reached the Capitol at 11:53 a. m., amid uproarious cheers of a crowd estimated by Captain William S. Orthman of the Capitol police at more than 75,000.

HAIL TO THE CHIEF

Among those seated in the section reserved for the presidential party were Raymond Massey, actor known for his portrayal of Abraham Lincoln roles, and Charles Chaplin, the film comedian.

The marine band greeted the President by playing "Hail to the Chief."

Members of the Supreme Court—all except Justice Douglas who was ill—mounted the white rostrum. Previously the court had held its regular Monday decision session.

Five minutes later, Garner and Wallace appeared. Both were bareheaded. Garner chatted with Justice Black and Wallace while awaiting the President.

When Mr. Roosevelt reached the platform, Garner administered the oath to Wallace at 12:10 p. m. A few minutes earlier, Chief Justice Hughes, clad in the black robes of his office, had chatted with both men.

BENEDICTION BY MONSIGNOR

The chief justice stepped forward and gave Mr. Rosevelt his oath for the third time at 12:11½ p. m.

Bareheaded, the President turned toward the vast audience before him and began his inaugural address.

The President concluded his speech at 12:29 p. m. and the audience applauded before Monsignor Michael J. Ready delivered the benediction.

Then Mr. Roosevelt stepped forward and waved his high silk hat as the Marine band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner."

Garner and Wallace rushed up to the President to shake his hand. Garner presented a few other dignitaries, and the group slowly filed back into the Capitol.

The entire ceremony, unique in the long traditions of the republic, had lasted little more than a half-hour.

Fella Can't See F. D. in Third Ceremony

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP) Falla, President Roosevelt's ever-present black Scottie, tried vainly to accompany his master to the oath-taking ceremony at the capitol today.

As the Chief Executive got into his automobile in the south grounds of the White House, the little dog, wagging his tail, jumped into the car behind him.

Ordering him out with a smile, the President said: "No, Falla, you can't go with me today."

Hub Firemen's Band Barred From Parade

By JAMES F. McENANEY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—The Boston fire department band today was banned from the President's inaugural parade.

In ruling the firemen off the route, parade officials decared it was not a military group and that previous arrangements had not been made for them to take part.

Deeply disappointed after having practiced for a month especially for the colorful event, band members appealed to Mayor Tobin and Cong. John W. McCormack.

Both the mayor and the congressman said they would take the matter up with the White House, but it was indicated that the original ruling would stand.

While Boston's firemen were faced with the prospects of looking on from the sidelines, high honors went to Massachusetts as a whole, although the State is headed by a Republican Governor.

Scheduled for the sixth place in the parade line after the inaugural was the Bay State's Gov. Leverett Saltonstall and his three cars of G. O. P.ers.

This honor went to Massachusetts because that State was the sixth to sign the Constitution.

After he has done his part to demonstrate national unity -- the reason he gave for attending the inauguration—Massachusetts' chief executive will stay on in effort to direct a large part of the shipbuilding business New England's way.

Planning to confer tomorrow with Asst. Secretary of War Robert Patterson, Gov. Saltonstall hoped to win approval of a plan calling for utilization of small shipyards and yacht building plants on the Bay State's north and south shores.

Described as sorely needed in the current defense program are small barges and craft which would carry army tanks and guns across bodies of water in wartime.

At the conference, the Governor will attempt to persuade federal officials to construct this particular type of craft in Massachusetts.

At the same time, possibility of further expansion at the Charlestown Navy Yard was being discussed by Mayor Tobin, City Council President William J. Galvin, Congressman MacCormack and Congressman Thomas A. Flaherty through Senator David I. Walsh.

All efforts of the visiting Bay Staters to obtain more defense business carried the hearty endorsement of Massachusetts' junior Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.

In the parade, the Governor said he would be accompanied by Mrs. Saltonstall, his aide, Lieut. Gov. Arthur Whorlon of the Marine Corps, Senator Lodge and Gen. Erickson. Other members of the official party will follow in two cars.

Gov. Saltonstall and his party found themselves facing a round of teas and receptions after their arrival which was climaxed by a dinner of governors, with William S. Knudsen and other defense commission members at the Carlton Hotel.

After the official ceremonies, he will attend a reception in his honor by the huge Bay State delegation at the Ambassador Hotel tonight.

John F. Fitzgerald, former Boston mayor, was one of six electors attending the Presidential electors' dinner who has voted three times for President Roosevelt.

Among the Massachusetts guests at the White House were former Lieut.-Gov. Francis Kelly, Jeanette Chisholm, former assistant district attorney of Middlesex County, and Anne Phelan, of Worcester, vice-chairman of the Democratic State Committee.

Among other prominent Democrats here, in addition to the Mayor, are former Gov and Mrs. Curley, Police Commissioner Timilty, U. S. Atty. and Mrs. Brandon Miss Mard Ward, former immigration commissioner; Judge and Mrs William Murray of Milford, Austin O'Connor, Owen A. Gallagher, Edward M. Gallagher and Mr. and Mrs. John Sargent.

for every sacrifice that we may make in the cause of national defense.

CAN BE NO RETREAT

"In the face of great perils never before encountered, our strong purpose is to protect and to perpetuate the integrity of democracy.

"For this we muster the spirit of America, and the faith of America.

"We do not retreat. We are not content to stand still. As Americans, we go forward, in the service of our country, by the will of God."

Seated about him on the platform were Mrs. Roosevelt, the President's aged mother and the members of the four generation family.

To his left as he spoke and the breeze ruffled his graying hair was Vice President Wallace, who leaned forward and never took his eyes from Mr. Roosevelt. Mrs. Wallace, a corsage of purple orchids pinned to her fur coat, sat beside Garner and Gov. Poe M M Neely of West Virginia.

FREEDOM LOOKS ON

Above the stand flew the stars and stripes and the President's own blue and gold flag, while high above the Statue of Freedom looked down from the dome.

The vast assembly, huddled in overcoats and blankets, listened quietly throughout the speech. There was a round of applause when the President made his declaration that democracy was not dying.

The democratic faith, he said with emphasis, speaks to us from the other nations of the hemisphere and from those across the sea—the enslaved, as well as the free.

To two honored guests on the platform those words had a special import—Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha of Norway, exiled from their homeland by the German invasion.

Garner Ends 38 Years' Congressional Life

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—John Nance Garner closed a 38 year Congressional career today by giving the oath of office to Henry Agard Wallace, his successor.

His white head bared in the sunlight, the 72 year old Garner read the vice presidential oath to Wallace, 24 years his junior, in a strong voice.

Wallace answered clearly, "I do," and a cheer went up from the more than 75,000 persons massed in front of the Capitol.

Garner stepped back, ending his work done and Wallace bowed slightly to the crowd.

A moment later, when President Roosevelt took the oath of office for a third term, Garner, who had sought the presidential nomination unsuccessfully and later had failed to vote in the November election, beamed broadly.

A few minutes previously the Senate met in a brief session, to overrule Garner's wishes and adopt unanimously a resolution praising the retiring vice president's record as presiding officer for the last eight years.

Garner had to borrow a silk hat to wear to the inauguration today.

This is another in a series of letters from Britishers to friends and relatives in Greater Boston.

To: Mrs. A. Shumrak, 47 Shepard st., Lynn.

From: 50 Belgrade rd., N. 10

My dearest Sister Annie:

Again, with God's blessing, I report our safety. We are all well and safe. The night before last was the first night, after 57 nights, during which there was no raid on London.

We all stayed in our shelters just the same, though. For we can't trust old Hitler or his messengers. But they tried to make up for it last night, and this morning. They did not get through this morning however.

I have not had a letter from you this week. I hope you are all well and not worrying more than you can help.

We are staying with some friends of mine in the same road and they are lovely to us. We always thought a lot of each other, and now they are proving their friendship.

The husband is also an old friend of mine and he is such a nice, pleasant chap.

They both try to make Daddy feel as much at home as possible. It may be months before our house is repaired. They think the world of Lily. She always has been very much at home with them.

Lily went to school yesterday and today. I hope she will be able to continue. She has not had a chance at all during the last month. She caught an awful cold in the shelter. I was really scared of her cough. But she is better. Shelter life is horrible.

We went in there at 6 o'clock last night and came out at 7 this morning. In spite of the bashing London got during the last two months London is still standing up. We can take it. May God help us all get through. Well dear, I must finish off now as I want to try to make some calls before the next siren screeches.

Lots of love from all of us here to you and Joe and kids and loads from Sonny (extra).

SARAH.

Italians, Greeks Join as Citizens

Although their fellow countrymen are at each other's throats in southeast Europe, Italians and Greeks outnumbered all others swearing allegiance to the United States at an unusually large naturalization session in Federal court today.

More than 500 took the oath of citizenship at three separate sessions and were welcomed by Judge George C. Sweeney who admonished them to "obey the laws and you'll get along all right."

Tiny flags were pinned on the lapel of each new citizen by a committee of women from the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion.

Mrs. Ann Mitchell, vice commander of the State Auxiliary, was in charge of this patriotic welcome assisted by the following members of the Auxiliary of Stoneham Post 115: Mrs. Ruth McHale, Mrs. Rose Coy, Mrs. Josephine Landry, Mrs. Phyllis Cook, Mrs. Hazel Cullen and Mrs. Esther Dunham.

ANOTHER BIG ADVANTAGE FOR YOU IN SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS

THE SMOKE'S THE THING

THE SMOKE OF SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS GIVES YOU

EXTRA MILDNESS, EXTRA COOLNESS, EXTRA FLAVOR—AND

28% LESS NICOTINE

than the average of the 4 other largest-selling brands tested—less than any of them—according to independent laboratory tests of the smoke itself

FOR many a year your taste and your tongue told you there was something distinctive about Camels ...something you just couldn't seem to find in any other cigarette.

Then scientific research told you Camels were slower-burning. You learned that this slower way of burning meant more mildness, more coolness, and more flavor in the smoke.

Now, new tests—impartial laboratory tests of the smoke itself—confirm still another advantage of Camel's slower burning: Less nicotine in the smoke. Less than any of the four other largest-selling brands tested—28% less than the average!

And when independent laboratory tests reveal such a distinct advantage for one brand of cigarettes over all the others tested—that's worth your looking into—right now!

Try the slower-burning cigarette ...try Camels. Compare them...compare them by smoking them. The smoke's the thing!

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina

"SMOKING OUT" THE FACTS about nicotine. Experts, chemists—and intricate laboratory machines—analyze the smoke of 5 of the largest-selling brands... find that the smoke of slower-burning Camels contains 28% less nicotine than the average of the other brands tested—less than any of them!

BY BURNING 25% SLOWER than the average of the 4 other largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them—Camels also give you a smoking plus equal, on the average, to 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

Writer Says Britain Will Crush Invasion

(Editor's note: Firm conviction that any attempted German invasion of England will meet with defeat is voiced in the following article by Robert G. Nixon, International News Service correspondent who has just returned from London. Nixon covered the British expeditionary force in Flanders and was in London from the beginning of the "blitz" until two weeks ago.)

By ROBERT G. NIXON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (INS)—England can repel a German invasion.

This is my considered opinion based upon an intimate study of the defense wall erected about the British Isles since the dark days of Dunkirk.

[illegible] extends for more than 100 miles. The coastal areas are alive with crawling troops of all categories.

Coming back to America for the first time since the war began, one of my first impressions has been one of alarm to find a general fear that England is facing virtual defeat—that it may all be over in a matter of a few weeks once a full-scale invasion is unleashed on the British Isles.

LOST HIS CHANCE

Had Hitler struck swiftly with all the power of his war machine the last week in June or the first two or three weeks in July, he might have been in London in 10 days.

He waited, and I believe his one chance is gone.

When I returned from France with the last handful of British soldiers that had fought below the Somme after Dunkirk, I asked one of the most astute neutral military observers in London what he thought of Britain's chances.

"If Britain can hold out until winter, she will not lose the war," he told me.

I talked with him again the day before I left London and he was convinced the danger of England being overwhelmed by direct assault is now past.

But that Germany will launch a full-scale attack as soon as the weather permits is taken for granted in England today just as much as the blackout and nightly air bombing. Britain's army, to a man, is praying that the day will not be long delayed.

At the moment Germany is concentrating every available ounce of energy in attempting to strangle British production by bombing its industrial towns, its ports and its storage dumps and at the same time to starve her into submission with a savage submarine, [illegible] and surface raider attack on Atlantic shipping.

Both methods of attack are taking their toll. The shipping attacks are especially critical. But I doubt they will win the war for Germany.

Pennsylvania's Alien Law Illegal

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (INS The Supreme Court, by a vote of 6 to 3, today held unconstitutional the alien registration act of Pennsylvania, under which aliens, with some exceptions, are required to register annually and exhibit identification cards to policemen.

The high court, in an opinion by Justice Black, ruled that the federal government had enacted an all-embracing system of alien registration and that conflicting State laws are invalid.

The court upheld a ruling of a three-judge federal court of Pennsylvania. Lewis G. Hines, Secretary of Labor and Industry of Pennsylvania, appealed the case.

Justice Stone wrote a dissenting opinion in which Chief Justice McReynolds joined.

Colors Provide Motifs In Gay Fashion Revue

By ANNICE BRINK

PURSUIT RED as the smartest accent for navy . . . that was one of the many new fashions set for success after being sponsored at the recent Fashion Futures showing in New York.

A wondrous unfolding of hundreds of models that continued into the early morning, ending long after ordinary mortals, who might have attended theatrical performances, had caught their suburban-bound trains and climbed thankfully into bed.

But it was undoubtedly worthwhile . . . for if you sat behind a pillar, you could at least catch a glimpse of the runway, and peek at such beautifully frocked celebrities as Ilka Chase.

And certainly it settled things . . . like . . . the fact that beige is the most prominent color in the natural shades, as well as the whole range of tan, clay, terra cotta and brown tones, in plain combinations.

There will be unusual amounts of color in the fashion scene, highlighting all shades of green . . . Kelly, emerald, olive, billiard, forest, spinach, vitamin and hunter's green! For evening, the lighter lime and chartreuse tones are leaders all through the sheer nets, organdies, taffetas and other floaty fabrics.

Afternoon dresses and important suits blossom in shades of purple and violet.

Dolman sleeves figure in the only drastic change in silhouette . . . the shoulder line is the chief sphere of change . . . with a straighter line featured, which, however, is softly padded.

Pattern 9601 may be ordered only in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 dress requires 3½ yards 39 inch fabric and ⅝ yard contrast.

SNOW TRAIN

Pulling Into Ski Country . . . Aboard the Sunday Morning Snow Train

By COURTNEY WILSON DEANE

The clatter of skis and stomping of boots reach a noisy climax as sleepy-headed people who have "just made it" squeeze in with a rush—and the Sunday Morning Snow Train pulls out of North Station.

Skis are more or less piled away. In racks, on seats, or piled at the end of the cars; high school kids tear up and down the aisles looking for friends; and, as things settle down, Sunday papers come out.

After yawns and the Funnies are exhausted, people begin to look around at other people and the somewhat solemn atmosphere begins to warm up as early morning greetings and feelings are exchanged:

Train nice and warm! Brr-rr, how cold it was getting up! Isn't it a funny feeling dragging skis about on the subway? Some weather-rosy boy starts to wax his skis and pretty soon he has to have the window open to cool off.

More people get out skis and lay them across the seats, waxing them energetically to get warmed up.

DEBATE WAXES

A general discussion of the best lacquer and wax results and no one agrees with anyone else very much.

Not everyone is ski-minded. Two young ladies in fuzzy coats and high heels are discussing where they can get a toboggan for the day. Mother and Dad are trying to find out from an "old hand" where they can safely deposit Sammy and Betty with their sleds while said fond parents go to watch the skiing. And did anybody know if there were going to be sled-dog races this Sunday?

As the train pulls in, trucks or buses meet the train and carry people off to the slopes. The snow-shoers are dropped in the low woods, the sledders on mild hills, and the skiers at the foot of a mountain.

That mountain may be any one of the scores of snow-fun developments about New England. Cannon Mt. in Franconia is one of the most northern, and Laconia-Gilford region is half-way up New Hampshire.

HOT DRINKS AWAIT

Cannon Mountan is the proud possessor of the first and only aerial passenger tram in America. Twenty-seven passengers at one time are swished over the tree tops for one mile, ascending two thousand feet in eight minutes. Two of the cars travel up and down on their cables controlled both by an operator below and conductors in the cars.

At the foot of the mountain is the Valley Station and at the top, the Mountain Station. Here are open fireplaces, hot chocolate and sandwiches, and lots of people getting warm. Just half a mile north of the Old Man of the Mountain, Cannon Mountain is good for a long season of skiing from November to late April or May. Trails range in type from the New Tram Trail for the Novice to the famous Taft Trail and Race Course.

In the Belknap Mountains is the new million dollar Recreational Park of Laconia and [illegible] has lighted skating rinks, [illegible] meter championships jumps, [illegible] gaming, ice fishing, and sleigh rides. For skiers, two of the wide practice slopes are lighted so that skiing goes on even into the night.

The new recreation building has a large ballroom for Saturday night dances and week-end skiers come in from districts all around. In his $200,000 cabin, are also the usual restaurant and warming fires, ski repair shop and supply store.

FIREPLACE OUTSIDE

Outside is an open fireplace and Ski-Trainers gather about deciding which trails to take next, and checking up on train time.

When dusk falls, a long line of people with skis over their shoulders leaves the hills and heads for the station. On the train again there is more hub bub than on the way up, for strangers have become friends.

In one car a group starts singing and people from other cars crowd in. Down at one end some of the girls are describing their bruises and vieing for first place with tales of adventure. Here and there two seats face and four boys are sprawled asleep with legs twined and tightly packed on the seats.

And so the Snow Train rolls back to Boston and one sings hard trying to hang onto last moments of fun before thinking of school or work the next day.

FULL TEXT OF INAUGURAL ADDRESS

EVENING AMERICAN, MONDAY, JANUARY 20, 1941

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Text of President Roosevelt's inaugural address:

On each national day of inauguration since 1789, the people have renewed their sense of dedication to the United States.

In Washington's day the task of the people was to create and weld together a nation.

In Lincoln's day the task of the people was to preserve that nation from disruption from within.

In this day the task of the people is to save that nation and its institutions from disruption from without.

To us there has come a time, in the midst of swift happenings, to pause for a moment and take stock—to recall what our place in history has been, and to rediscover what we are and what we may be. If we do not, we risk the real peril of inaction.

Lives of nations are determined not by the count of years, but by the lifetime of the human spirit. The life of a man is three-score years and ten: a little more, a little less. The life of a nation is the fullness of the measure of its will to live.

FREEDOM SAFE

There are men who doubt this. There are men who believe that democracy, as a form of government and a frame of life, is limited or measured by a kind of mystical and artificial fate that, for some unexplained reason, tyranny and slavery have become the surging wave of the future and that freedom is an ebbing tide.

But we Americans know that this is not true.

Eight years ago, when the life of this republic seemed frozen by a fatalistic terror, we proved that this is not true. We were in the midst of shock—but we acted quickly, boldly, decisively.

These later years have been living years—fruitful years for the people of this democracy. For they have brought to us greater security and, I hope, a better understanding that life's ideals are to be measured in other than material things.

Most vital to our present and our future is this experience of a democracy which successfully survived crisis at home; put away many evil things; built new structures on enduring lines; and, through it all, maintained the fact of its democracy.

For action has been taken within the three-way framework of the Constitution of the United States. The co-ordinate branches of the government continue freely to function. The Bill of Rights remains inviolate. The freedom of elections is wholly maintained. Prophets of the downfall of American democracy have seen their dire predictions come to naught.

Democracy is not dying.

We know it because we have seen it revive—and grow.

We know it cannot die—because it is built on the unhampered initiative of individual men and women joined together in a common enterprise—an enterprise undertaken and carried through by the free expression of a free majority.

BENEATH SURFACE

We know it because democracy alone, of all forms of government, enlists the full force of men's enlightened will.

We know it because democracy alone has constructed an unlimited civilization capable of infinite progress in the improvement of human life.

We know it because, if we look below the surface, we sense it still spreading on every continent—for it is the most humane, the most advanced, and in the end the most unconquerable of all forms of human society.

A nation, like a person, has a body—a body that must be fed and clothed and housed, invigorated and rested, in a manner that measures up to the objectives of our time.

A nation, like a person, has a mind—a mind that must be kept informed and alert, that must know itself, that understands the hopes and the needs of its neighbors—all the other nations that live within the narrowing circle of the world.

And a nation, like a person, has something deeper, something more permanent, something larger than the sum of all its parts. It is that something which matters most to its future— which calls forth the most sacred guarding of its present.

It is a thing for which we find it difficult—even impossible to hit upon a single, simple word.

And yet we all understand what it is—the spirit—the faith of America. It is the product of centuries. It was born in the multitudes of those who came from many lands—some of high degree, but mostly plain people—who sought here, early and late, to find freedom more freely.

The democratic aspiration is no mere recent phase in human history. It is human history. It permeated the ancient life of early peoples. It blazed anew in the Middle Ages. It was written in Magna Carta.

In the Americas its impact has been irresistible. America has been the new world in all tongues, to all peoples, not because this continent was a new-found land, but because all those who came here believed they could create upon this continent a new life—a life that should be new in freedom.

Its vitality was written into our own Mayflower Compact, into the Declaration of Independence, into the Constitution of the United States, into the Gettysburg Address.

TASKS TO DO

Those who first came here to carry out the longings of their spirit and the millions who followed, and the stock that sprang from them—all have moved forward constantly and consistently toward an ideal which in itself has gained stature and clarity with each generation.

The hopes of the republic cannot forever tolerate either undeserved poverty or self-serving wealth.

We know that we still have far to go; that we must more greatly build the security and the opportunity and the knowledge of every citizen, in the measure justified by the resources and the capacity of the land.

But it is not enough to achieve these purposes alone. It is not enough to clothe and feed the body of this nation, and instruct and inform its mind. For there is also the spirit. And of the three, the greatest is the spirit.

Without the body and the mind, as all men know, the nation could not live.

But if the spirit of America were killed, even though the nation's body and mind, constricted in an alien world, lived on, the America we know would have perished.

That spirit—that faith—speaks to us in our daily lives in ways often unnoticed, because they seem so obvious. It speaks to us here in the capital of the nation. It speaks to us through the processes of governing in the sovereignties of forty-eight States.

It speaks to us in our counties, in our cities, in our towns, and in our villages. It speaks to us from the other nations of the hemisphere, and from those across the seas—the enslaved, as well as the free.

AMERICA'S FATE

Sometimes we fail to hear or heed these voices of freedom because to us the privilege of our freedom is such an old, old story.

The destiny of America was proclaimed in words of prophecy spoken by our first President in his first inaugural in 1789—words almost directed, it would seem, to this year of 1941:

"The preservation of the sacred fire of liberty and the destiny of the republican model of government are justly considered . . . deeply, . . . finally, staked on the experiment intrusted to the hands of the American people."

If we lose that sacred fire—if we let it be smothered with doubt and fear—then we shall reject the destiny which Washington strove so valiantly and so triumphantly to establish. The preservation of the spirit and faith of the nation does, and will, furnish the highest justification for every sacrifice that we may make in the cause of national defense.

In the face of great perils never before encountered, our strong purpose is to protect and to perpetuate the integrity of democracy.

For this we muster the spirit of America, and the faith of America.

We do not retreat. We are not content to stand still. As Americans, we go forward, in the service of our country, by the will of God.

Address Highlights

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Some outstanding passages from President Roosevelt's third inaugural address:

In the face of great perils never before encountered, our strong purpose is to protect and to perpetuate the integrity of democracy.

We do not retreat. We are not content to stand still. As Americans, we go forward, in the service of our country, by the will of God.

The preservation of the spirit and faith of the nation does, and will, furnish the highest justification for every sacrifice that we may make in the cause of national defense.

The life of a nation is the fullness of the measure of its will to live.

There are men who believe . . . that, for some unexplained reason, tyranny and slavery have become the surging wave of the future—and that freedom is an ebbing tide. But we Americans know that is not true.

Democracy is not dying.

Democracy alone, of all forms of government, enlists the full force of men's enlightened will.

The hopes of the republic cannot forever tolerate either undeserved poverty or self-serving wealth.

We know that we still have far to go; that we must more greatly build the security and the opportunity and the knowledge of every citizen, in the measure justified by the resources and the capacity of the land.

Big Business Boom Faces New England

By RALPH E. FLANDERS
President, New England Council

New England, like the rest of the country, enters the New Year on a rising tide of business activity. The eleventh month of 1940 found the New England Council's index of business activity at the highest level in a decade—more than 10 per cent above the estimated normal.

RALPH E. FLANDERS

It is common knowledge, however, that this rise, both in New England and elsewhere, is in large part due to the huge national defense program. To date, defense contracts and expenditures in New England total $1,500,000,000—a figure that represents a very large proportion of a full year's output by the men and machines employed in New England industries.

Defense contracts and expenditures have now permeated to nearly every part of New England, and, in one form or another, to most of our industries. They are beginning to produce increases in employment, increases in retail buying, and decreases in employable workers on general relief.

There is every reason to believe that these conditions will be even more evident in the months ahead. The New England farmer and the New England workers will find their products and services in better demand in 1941 than for several years past.

OTHER SIDE OF PICTURE

There is another side of the picture, which neither government, management, nor the humblest taxpayer can ignore. National defense programs are expensive on any scale. Our own defense programs is costly beyond the ability of the average man to comprehend.

It is reckoned in billions of dollars—not by one or two billions, but by tens of billions. A few of the billions of cost will be raised by taxation. The remainder must come from borrowings, thereby adding to our national debt, the interest on which must be paid in dollars each year, and these dollars in turn must be taken right out of the pockets of the taxpayer.

And it is not alone the bankers and financial institutions from whom our government will borrow. Already the handwriting is on the wall, pointing to a coming demand upon all of us alike, whether wage-worker, manager, or investor, to divert a part of our personal incomes into loans in one form or another to our government. Large proportions of business profits will be recaptured by the taxing authorities about as rapidly as they are earned.

Clearly, the year ahead is one of hard work for each of us, and should be accompanied by the best of good management on the part of everyone, from government all the way down to each individual in the conduct of his own affairs. Here in New England we can keep a watchful eye upon the expenditures of our State and local governments, with a view to holding their

Problem to Curb Cost of Living

One of the biggest problems in Massachusetts, and throughout the nation, under the defense program will be to increase the amount of production and provide employment for more people without seriously raising the cost of living. The pressing need is not higher wages for workers employed but rather the means of employing more people at present wages and present buying power. In other words: (1) make more goods, (2) more jobs, (3) keep down the cost of living. If numbers (1) and (3) can be taken care of, there will be no trouble about increasing employment or the real prosperity of the Commonwealth.

Survey On in Mass. Plants

A searching, exhaustive survey of the manufacturing plant facilities and potentialities of this State begins today as Massachusetts observes with the rest of the nation the first day of "Preparedness Through Production Week."

The survey, part of industry's nation-wide "census" to determine its assets in terms of machines, manufacturing facilities, equipment and potentiality-for-conversion to national defense work, is being conducted in this state by the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, working in conjunction with the National Industrial Council.

Lauded by members of the National Defense Commission at Washington for the ambitious scope of the project and hailed by men in public life as an unselfish, patriotic move on the part of the nation's manufacturers, the survey is scheduled to be completed by Saturday, Jan. 25, which has been set aside as "Preparedness Through Production Day."

In a bulletin issued last Thursday to all member manufacturers of the Associated Industries, President John F. Tinsley stated:

"So that Massachusetts manufacturers may make their facilities fully known to the proper authorities within our government, a questionnaire has been prepared giving sufficient details to help find new and necessary sources for government contracts."

AND ITS INDUSTRIES!

¶ Boston, today, has over 5500 manufacturing establishments employing over 225,000 wage earners, making products valued at practically one and one-half billion dollars, with a payroll of over a quarter of a billion dollars yearly.

¶ Boston is the oldest industrial area in the United States and is the fourth largest. Always a leader in the industrial picture of the country, Boston is famous for many lines of products that require skilled manipulations and the use of precision machinery.

¶ In the defense program Boston industry has responded with 100% co-operation and an effort that is backed with a tremendous backlog of experience that fits the needs of our great United States.

Factory Wages Set New Record

By MELVIN L. MORSE

Supervisor of Industrial Surveys, State Planning Board

Studies by the State Planning Board to assist the national defense program and also in preparing for the eventual readjustment to peace time production have brought out the following observations with regard to Massachusetts employment and wages. Sources of the basic data used are the census of manufactures returns and current monthly reports by the Massachusetts Department of Labor and Industries.

From these published reports of employment, wages, production and living costs, it is apparent that the average earnings of the half million wage earners employed in Massachusetts factories are now the highest in history, if measured in terms of their buying power. They are 7 per cent higher per average wage earner than a year ago, 12 per cent higher than the monthly average for 1929, 47 per cent higher than in 1916, the year before this country entered the World War.

FACTORY JOBS OFF

The number of factory wage earners now employed, however, is about 26 per cent less than the average in 1916. That is where the economic shoe has been pinching. In 1916 Massachusetts factories averaged about 682,600 wage earners. The highest yearly average was 719,000 in 1918. In 1919 the average dropped to 714,000 and continued generally downward year by year until 1932 when it reached 351,000.

Since then the trend has turned upward, except for interruptions in 1938 and 1939, so that at the present time the number of factory wage earners stands a little over 500,000. These figures do not include salaried employees.

Explanation of this decline in number of wage workers in found mainly in the increased substitution of machine for hand labor. It does not signify a decline in Massachusetts industry. The present value of Massachusetts industrial products is estimated at the rate of about $2,750,000,000 per year, compared with $2,350,000,000 in 1916 and $3,392,000,000 in 1929.

If we estimate the physical volume of Massachusetts production, by correcting the dollar value figures to allow for the difference in average wholesale price level, we find the current rate of output is fully as large as in 1929 and probaby at least 25 per cent larger than in 1916.

ROUGH ESTIMATES

Comparing these estimates of physical volume of production with the number of wage-earners, it appears that under present methods the average worker produces about 75 per cent more goods than he did in 1916 and 10 per cent more than in 1929.

Upward Trend For Earnings Should Spread

By J. E. MALLOY

Hornblower & Weeks

With indications pointing to a further expansion in industrial and trade activity, the question remaining to be answered is to what extent earnings and hence dividends, which in the final analysis determine the value of equities, may be retarded by government taxes and other restrictive measures. Increased taxation may modify but should not check the rise in corporate earnings that should result from a sharp increase in Federal spending. The trend of earnings should continue upward for some time to come.

Equities have seldom looked more attractive from a current price-earnings ratio and yield standpoint and therefore, investment demand should continue to exert a stabilizing influence in view of the plethora of funds seeking employment. When money is a drug on the market, as it is today, it means for one thing that capital is timid.

The market cannot be expected to detach itself entirely from war influences. Although normal deductions under present conditions cannot be entirely relied upon nevertheless, it may be well to remember that the market seldom discounts the same event twice. In this respect, the rapidity and extent of the decline in the second quarter of 1940 reflected fear of a quick German victory and hence, a German-dictated peace. Accordingly, it seems reasonable to assume that the market has discounted to a large extent all known possibilities short of this country's entrance into the conflict. Such restraining factors as remain show a diminishing ability to influence prices in general and seem likely to fully spend their force in the first quarter of 1941, thus paving the way for a resumption of the uptrend in the form of a spring advance.

What INDUSTRY Means to New England!

¶ Industry in New England is the Horn of Plenty from which flows products, prosperity and employment for varied workers. Its benefits encompass not only the boundaries of the six states, but spread to every corner of the land.

¶ Industry in America was pioneered in New England, and though today there may be sections of larger expanse, it is still one of the country's most intensively developed manufacturing areas, with an unequalled industrial diversification.

¶ New England has more than 16,000 manufacturing establishments. Of the 350 classifications into which America's products are divided, nearly two-thirds are to be found "Made in New England."

¶ Over a million workers earn an annual aggregate payroll of better than a billion dollars. Truly, industry in New England is an important source of life blood contributing to the economic health and growth of the six states.

LATHES TURN AS INDUSTRY SPEEDS UP TO TAKE CARE OF WAR ORDERS HERE

Many Bay State Plants Expand To Push U. S. Defense Program

By R. F. WILLIAMS
General Manager, Associated Industries of Massachusetts

A cursory study of the Associated Industries' survey on plant expansions and new industries locating in Massachusetts from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 1940, which has just been completed, furnishes powerful proof that the industries leadership in this Commonwealth has accepted the challenge of National Defense, and that the manufacturers early respond to the government's needs in ordnance procurement, quartermaster corps purchases, chemical warfare needs, and aircraft manufacturing.

It also indicates that, for some time to come, the symbols of our industrial life will be capacity production, plant expansion and vastly increased payrolls.

This annual survey, jointly sponsored by the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, the Massachusetts Development & Industrial Commission, and prepared with the assistance of the State Department of Labor & Industries, the Massachusetts Planning Board, and the Chambers of Commerce throughout the state, reveals that there has been widespread plant expansion during the year in approximately 155 concerns.

The total area added in plant expansion will exceed 3,000,000 feet at most conservative estimates. To this amount should be added the area and plant facilities required by more than 183 new concerns that have brought new industrial value to the state.

DEFENSE BOON

Incidentally, this expansion in 327 industrial concerns for the current year in both new and old manufacturing plants matches similar expansions for 1938 and 1939, namely, 241 new plants and expansions in 1938, and 354 in 1939. In neither case are the figures for plant expansions and new industries counterbalanced with the losses and removals in the corresponding years, for the purpose of this survey is not to decry mortality statistics in manufacturing nor to explain away the manufacturing migrations which come with the years.

Impetus to this sizable manufacturing expansion is the obvious boon of the national defense program wherein our major steel-working industries, machine tool and precision instrument concerns, manufacturers of abrasive wheels and optical instruments, gear and tool industries, and airplane parts manufacturers as well as a number of our textile and shoe factories have become immediate beneficiaries.

The boon started last summer with, and became increasingly active in, supplying the Government's needs in first line defense. This activity has been translated into almost one billion dollars of U. S. Government contracts placed with the manufacturers of Massachusetts since May, 1940.

As shown through special weekly reports of U. S. Government contract awards prepared by the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, the staggering total of $[illegible] has been written on the books of Massachusetts industries up to, and including, the Government awards announced on Dec. 26.

Predominant in this total are the battleships, cruisers and destroyers to be built at the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co. and the Charlestown Navy Yard which, together, total more than half the value of the contracts placed in this area.

Insurance Co. 50 Years Old

The Boston Mutual Life Insurance Co. celebrates its golden anniversary this year, having been incorporated in 1891. This well known institution, which was reorganized as a mutual legal reserve company nine years later, has 33 branch offices in New England, including 12 in the Boston metropolitan area.

JAY R. BENTON

Jay R. Benton, who was Atty. Gen. of Massachusetts for four years, is president of the company, and Edward C. Mansfield, a former postmaster of Boston, has served as secretary and treasurer for 26 years.

The Board of Directors is made up of men well known in business and financial circles in this part of the country, including two former Massachusetts Insurance Commissioners.

In charge of the investment policies of the company is the Finance Committee. In addition to the president, the members are: Seward W. Jones and Frank L. Richardson, president and executive vice-president, respectively, of the Newton Trust Company; John W. Manning, vice-president of the State Street Trust Company; and J. Leonard Johnson, president of the Metropolitan Coal Company.

Last year Boston Mutual increased its business $4,757,258 and entered 1941 with $84,604,349 insurance in force and has now 25,175 policyholders. The excellent underwriting record made for the year by the field force was under the supervision and management of William H. Moody, superintendent of agencies, whose service with the Boston Mutual covers a period of 34 years. He joined the company as assistant superintendent at Lynn in 1906. Subsequently he headed the district offices at Salem and Boston. He was promoted to the Home Office as assistant superintendent of agencies in 1925 and four years later became the head of the agency forces of the company.

Ledger assets increased 5 per cent, the total on December 31 being $14,966,280. Excess of income over disbursements was $96,639 and over $60,000 was added to surplus, which now stands at $727,696.

During the year the company invested $2,386,777 in bonds and approximately 75 per cent of this, or $1,808,440, was in United States government bonds. Cash balances on the last day of the year amounted to $387,407.

The Boston Mutual paid to policyholders and beneficiaries during 1940 over $1,768,783, and at the last directors' meeting dividends to policyholders were declared for this year on the same basis as in 1940. The directors also voted to institute dividends on the retirement fund policies, which modern form of coverage was made available for purchase a few months ago. Over $245,000 has been provided for 1941 dividends, which amount is the largest ever set aside for distribution in the history of the company.

Home Financing Spurt Described

The twelve months of 1940, according to Ernest A. Hale, president of the Suffolk Co-operative Federal Savings & Loan Assn. of Boston who shortly begins his 29th year as an officer of this institution, have witnessed the greatest activity both in home-financing and savings enjoyed by this association in more than a decade.

"During 1940," said Mr. Hale, "the volume of lending for the financing of residential properties by this institution throughout Greater Boston was over two million dollars, doubling the amount of first mortgage loans placed by us in 1939. It is interesting to note that a major portion of this amount was granted to families purchasing new homes, an indication of the increased home-building activity now under way in this area.

"Perhaps one of the major contributing factors toward the accelerating demand for homes," continued Mr. Hale, "lies in the fact that the family which owns its home has, to a large degree, succeeded in 'pegging' its cost for shelter over the full period of the mortgage loan, whether it is 12, 16 or 20 years. The renting family may find itself forced to pay as much as 50 per cent more for the rented home or apartment as costs rise and demand increases. The home-buying family, on the other hand, not only has the satisfaction of knowing that its monthly shelter costs are definitely fixed, but also that a growing portion of each monthly payment becomes savings or equity in the home."

Special Committee Gives U. S. Tax Data

A special committee studying governmental finance has presented to the National Association of Manufacturers certain recommendations concerning federal taxes that will bear review:

Restoration of the right to file consolidated returns for normal income tax purposes; elimination of the double taxation of dividends received by corporations; relief from normal taxes of dividends received by individuals; repeal of the declared-value excess profits tax and related capital stock tax; extension of the two-year loss carry-over period to five years.

Federal Savings, Loan Banks Report Substantial Growth

By OSCAR F. FALLING

President, New England Federal Savings League

Coming to the close of their third full year of operation since adopting Federal charter, the 26 Federal savings and loan associations in Massachusetts show a most substantial rate of growth. All of these institutions had been known in their localities for many years as state chartered co-operative banks. As Federal savings and loan associations they are still entirely co-operative, owned and controlled by the members whose savings are entrusted to them.

Under the Federal plan of operation, however, they have gained certain advantages which apparently are much appreciated by savers and home buyers, for during the past three years their amount of private savings and investment capital has increased 45 per cent and their total of home mortgage loans outstanding has grown 42 per cent.

UNUSUAL GROWTH

This unusual growth speaks for itself of the service which these modern type thrift banking associations are rendering in the state. All savings and investments in them shares are doubly protected by insurance up to $5000 per account in the most powerful savings insurance system of the country, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

In all the other New England states the experience of the Federal savings and loan associations has been equally good, indicating that the benefits of the system itself, rather than local conditions, are primarily responsible for its success.

OUTLOOK GOOD

For the coming year the outlook seems extremely good. Demand for housing for industrial workers such as has not been known since the 1920's is the prospect. So far industry has only been looking up for the defense orders on which work will fully get under way sometime in 1941.

Two new trends will appear more prominently in the home building of 1941. One is the mass production of dwellings by large construction companies, the other is development of the modern four-family and eight-family apartment house for rent. These buildings will have the exterior appearance and landscaping of pretentious residences, but the cost per family will be moderate.

Modernization and rearrangement of older dwellings will serve a part in meeting the new housing need. Not only can these older dwellings be made ready more quickly than new building, but their rehabilitation and restoration to earning power will make the best possible cushion against reaction after the defense program is finished.

NEW HOUSING SITES

Many of the old duplex houses now for sale at low prices can be remodeled into four-apartment houses, providing ample room for the small-size family and greatly increasing the property's value to the community.

Every effort should be made to place new housing where people will want to live after the defense program diminishes. This means that defense housing in the main should be located in convenient suburbs and that the dwelling units should be of a type that will be attractive as permanent homes.

OSCAR F. FALLING

The Federal savings and loan associations are fully alert to the housing needs of defense and are perhaps best designed, with their large reservoir of credit, to meet them. No sound project is too large for these associations to finance. In co-operation with the facilities of the Federal Housing Administration, they give complete assurance of ample funds to carry through all necessary defense housing.

DEFENSE HOUSING

At the same time, the associations are exerting every influence to make defense housing of a sort and location which will be permanently useful, thereby helping to avoid a dangerous volume of unwanted homes after the emergency is over.

In the same way, the Federal savings and loan associations are working actively to encourage thrift savings among employes of war industries. This period we are entering in 1941 will be much like that of 1917 when certain groups of employes enjoyed greatly increased incomes. If a part of this new spending power can be saved until the defense program is completed, it will help to prevent inflation of living costs, which otherwise seems inevitable.

Should we [illegible] we [illegible] on [illegible] which will [illegible] the process [illegible]

The year 1941 will be no ordinary year. It will be different from any previous year in our history. While we can talk about it in the usual business terms, we all know in our hearts that such considerations will not necessarily prevail in the year ahead. We all know that menace of the aggressor overseas, with his death system, based upon contempt of what we consider the man and the rights of man, draws ever closer to us.

We may be called upon to defend to the uttermost our national freedom, independence and security, in which case all citizens, all forms of business activity, will be drafted into the national service.

General Foods Supplies N. E. With Tasty Package Goods

By C. M. CHESTER
Chairman, General Foods Corporation

What's ahead for New England in 1941? If you are talking about the housewives' cookery, long famous in this section, the answer unquestionably will be:

"It'll be a good year! An abundance of tasty, economical, packaged foods to supply New England's dinner tables; and increased family purses in many districts, which automatically will stimulate the consumer demand for higher quality foods."

Here in General Foods, we take a keen interest in New England's dietetic habits for several significant reasons.

First, did you know that both the oldest and one of the youngest members of the General Foods "family" of foods originated in New England? We're proud of the Walter Baker chocolate plant in Dorchester, which celebrated its 175th anniversary in 1941; and proud, too, of the Birds Eye Frosted Foods division, which started its retail sales here about a decade ago and has grown steadily.

In fact, today there are 1075 Birds Eye retail stores in New England compared with 670 at the end of last year. Ten years ago, there were 18, when New England was the first to taste these ultra modern foods.

Second among the reasons for our keen interest in this part of the United States is the fact that close to 2000 employes of the company live and work in New England. These men and women are valuable members of the communities hereabouts. They are efficient workers and good citizens.

Third, in our inventory of assets, are the numerous factories, warehouses, shops and ships which General Foods keeps busy in the New England area.

Among them are productional and sales activities of General Seafoods, Birds Eye Frosted Foods, and Walter Baker in the Boston district; Bluepoint oyster plants in Rhode Island and Connecticut waters and on around Long Island; the Atlantic Gelatine plant at Woburn, and the Minute Tapioca plant at Orange.

All this New England activity helped General Foods in 1940 to enjoy a record year of sales. At the same time we had a record year in employment.

We are hoping for another good year in 1941. We are co-operating with the national defense program by striving in every way to step up efficiency, to invest in laboratory research to make our products even better or to find popular new foods, and to further production and sales wherever possible.

ACTION ON HARBOR FRONT

ANZAC CARGO—Activity at the Port of Boston is renewed with the arrival of a British wool cargo from Australia. Allan J. Wilson, of A. Towle Company is shown with his son, examining the manifest before the wool is transported to bonded warehouses and mills in New England.

Shoe Firm Pioneering In Infants' Footwear

It is by reason of pioneering that New England has so long maintained its leadership in the shoe industry.

A new line of infants' footwear which combines smart styling and comfort was introduced by the Dunn Shoe Co. of Danvers, makers of Pit-A-Pat shoes for children.

An interesting feature in a special sheathing spring-board innersole which by reason of its porous construction, insulates against heat and cold. Owing to its high resiliency, it acts as an aid to the child in its first steps.

Another innovation is a patently wing trim which enhances the beauty of the lines of the shoe and serves to give better support to the ankle.

Still another innovation is an infants' shoe with a contrasting color cuff.

This may well prove to be the forerunner in a new trend toward better styling and more comfort in infants' footwear.

Deposits Mount In Savings Banks

By CHARLES C. HANDY
President, Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts

The savings banks of the state have maintained and somewhat increased their deposits during the past year so that as of Oct. 31, 1940, the latest official figure, the deposits of the 192 mutual savings banks of the state were $2,138,317,803.75.

This figure, it should be noted, is the highest for any year in the history of Massachusetts savings banks with but two exceptions, those of the years 1937 and 1931 when total deposits were somewhat larger.

Charles C. Handy

This large total of deposits distributed among 2,815,694 accounts is testimony to the continued confidence of the people of Massachusetts in their mutual savings banks and also of the fact that Massachusetts people continue to be thrifty.

Indeed, although the casual observer might think that Americans were an improvident people indulging in an installment buying spree, the truth is that despite the difficult period of the 1930's the deposits in Massachusetts mutual savings banks have had a remarkable stability.

THRIFT URGED

Looking forward to 1941, bankers see an even greater necessity for the cultivation of thrift by our citizens, for savings are vital to the success of the defense program upon which the nation is embarked. For that defense program, billions of dollars of new capital will be needed which must come, to a considerable degree, from the savings of the people accumulated in thrift banking institutions.

The stimulus of the defense program has already resulted in more employment and larger payrolls. It is to be hoped that many more people will thus have an opportunity to renew or begin habits of regular saving.

Savings banks played an important part in financing the Federal Government during 1917 and 1918, and they are ready today to cooperate loyally in the present defense effort.

Defense programs are no new thing to savings banks for throughout their long history they have served the people and the nation during the Mexican, the Civil, the Spanish and the first World War. Indeed, the first savings bank was established in 1816 just after the close of the War of 1812, and 1941 marks the 125th year of mutual savings banks in the nation.

Big Spurt in Savings Bank Life Insurance

Savings bank life insurance in force in Massachusetts is expected to gross the $200,000,000 mark early in 1941, according to a statement by Robert F. Nutting, president of the Savings Bank Life Insurance Council. As compared with 26 years required to obtain the first $100,000,000, the second hundred million will have been written in less than seven years.

Mr. Nutting observes:

"The success of savings bank life insurance has proved beyond question that thrifty Massachusetts people in ever-increasing numbers want this safe, low-cost family protection. It justifies the belief of former Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis, father of the Savings Bank Life Insurance idea that the best method of increasing the demand for life insurance is not eloquent, persistent persuasion but, as in the case of other necessities of life, to furnish a good article at a low price."

Savings bank life insurance is issued on both adults and children, with Massachusetts citizens from six months to 70 years eligible for insurance provided they are in good health at the time policies are purchased.

Insurance is issued in amounts ranging from as little as $250 up to $25,000. Over three-quarters of the policyholders own $1000 or less.

All regular forms of life insurance are available at the 135 savings banks which offer savings bank life insurance service. These include straight life, limited payment life, endowment and term insurance. Plans are available whereby the purchase of insurance is combined with regular savings on a weekly basis.

"The growth of savings bank life insurance is an indication of the continued vitality and broadening service of the mutual savings banks of Massachusetts," Mr. Nutting points out. "We look for further steady progress in this important field of public service."

Bank's Loans Bigger

Henry H. Pierce, president of the Merchants Co-operative Bank, largest bank of its kind in Massachusetts, today stated:

"An increase of 350 per cent in loans on real estate and a 50 per cent increase in sales of real estate with book values amounting to approximately $1,350,000 in this bank confirms our prophecy of a year ago of increased employment and business activity.

"Again, all signs point to continued expansion of business activity, employment, production, and sales. The preparedness program will reward intelligent, experienced, and skilled workers in every line of endeavor, and will furnish the necessary demand and encouragement as well as the possibility of new technological development in every line, thus benefiting both the people and production.

"The result will be more and steadier employment and more profitable and more interesting work. Because of this activity, there will be more money and hence more purchasing power, and greater uses of ingenuity.

"Thrift in its broadest sense will increase, bank activity and real estate activity will increase and private building construction costs will rise and be followed by retarded construction because of government housing developments and government use of materials and labor supplies.

"Because cities and towns should have less welfare and other expenses now caused by unemployment, there should be no increase in real estate taxes and hence returns and values on home property should then swing upwards because of stationary real estate taxes and continued occupancy.

"More inclusive income and corporation taxes together with greater business activity, are more than likely to bring additional money to workers in the form of bonuses which they use first to purchase necessities, then to build up reserves in banks or in equities in their homes.

"The Merchants Co-operative Bank will continue to assist the thrifty in the encouragement of thrift by systematic monthly saving and ownership of homes on a monthly reduction basis."

VALUE OF GOODS UP

At the present time the average value of goods produced in Massachusetts is about $4.60 for each $1 of wages paid. In 1929 it was $4.89 and in 1916 it was $5.24. The same downward trend was apparent from the census figures.

Co-op's Growth Sharp

William T. A. Fitzgerald, president of the Volunteer Co-operative Bank, announces the completion of the bank's 53rd year of service to the community. During that period the bank has paid dividends regularly without interruption.

President Fitzgerald states that the bank has grown steadily each year until now it is one of the largest co-operative banks in this area. The institution's success is attributed to a safe and sound policy of management and investment.

Mr. Fitzgerald for many years has had expert knowledge of real estate trends and values, and he is a member of the "committee on trends" of the United States Savings and Loan League.

"Over the years it has certainly been a pleasure to watch thousands of families in the Greater Boston area own their own homes free and clear through the practical Volunteer Co-operative Bank mortgage plan," says Mr. Fitzgerald.

Under this plan, he states, one monthly payment includes principal, taxes and interest, the latter automatically reducing each month. In this way the mortgagee owns his home quickly at the lowest possible cost.

Mr. Fitzgerald also states that the savings plan of the Volunteer Co-operative has remained popular over the years, because it assures the payment of as liberal dividends as possible consistent with earnings. All shares in the bank are insured up to their full value under Massachusetts laws.

Saving Prospects Good for New Year

The American people begin 1941 with a record accumulation of savings in all forms and with favorable prospects for improved earnings. The short term view distinctly is favorable for productive activity of every kind, increased employment and payrolls, and some surplus to save.

Industrial states and communities especially benefit from the unequalled demand for tools, machines and every kind of equipment needed to produce war goods, plus the sales of those goods, which are taking on huge proportions.

Looking Ahead

Because cheap electricity is a vital contribution to modern living and working standards, our biggest task is the anticipation and keeping ahead of the rapid growth of our many communities.

But as each year passes, large scale rebuilding, new construction, and new distribution improvements are keeping your electric service unlimited in quantity, dependable as humanly possible, flexible to your needs and lower in cost.

The personnel of this Company is justly proud of the progressive part that over fifty years of electric service has played in maintaining Eastern Maine's enviable high standard of living.

Machine Tool Plants Doubled Output in Year, Survey Shows

In the period between August of 1939 and September of 1940 machine tool companies in the United States more than doubled their output, it was made known today in a survey of the nation by the National Machine Tool Builders Association.

The survey published is based on information received in questionnaires from 115 companies, comprising approximately 80 per cent of the machine tool capacity of the nation.

The questionnaires were sent to all machine tool companies of the country last October and asked specific information as to plant expansion, employment and engineering and development work undertaken on behalf of the national defense program.

"In considering the substance of these replies," the report states, "it is important to bear in mind that the story here told is not one of expansion and development for a normal market plus defense requirements.

ABNORMAL EXPANSION

"It is the story of abnormal expansion and development almost entirely for national defense purposes.

"On the basis of what the industry has accomplished in 1941 and in the light of the steady increase in production and the further expansion planned or contemplated, the National Machine Tool Builders' Association anticipates that machine tool production for 1941 will reach $600,000,000."

In 1939, it was pointed out in the report, machine tool production "reached the new high peak of per cent above the 1939 production.

"We were using only about 20 per cent of our available space in 1939," the report continues, "and are now using practically all.

"No additional plant facilities have been built but we have occupied about 30,000 to 40,000 square feet which was previously vacant.

EMPLOYMENT JUMPS

"Of the 115 companies included in the survey 106 report over $20,000,000 worth of new equipment installed between August of 1939 and September of 1940.

"Of the same number 110 companies report total employment at 68,801 in September of 1940, by contrast to 41,547 in August of 1939—an increase of 54 per cent.

"The result may be summed up in the startling fact that well nigh half of the nation's machine tool employes today have been trained on the job since September, 1939.

"Remarkably, this has been done without sacrificing the high standards of workmanship and accuracy that are essential to meet the needs of the defense contractors."

137 thousand miles of U.S. Highways

PAID FOR—ENTIRELY BY TRUCK TAXES!*

You pay less to drive and enjoy your car—because of taxes paid by America's trucks!

PICTURE a ribbon of concrete spanning rivers—reaching far across the plains—tunneling through mountains . . . three thousand miles from New York to San Francisco. Then multiply it 45 times—because . . .

Special highway taxes collected from trucks alone in the last ten years were enough to build 137,000 miles of modern highways. That's 45 times the distance from New York to San Francisco.*

In the next twelve months, special highway truck taxes will be enough to build 8,000 miles of new roads—PLUS enough to pay ALL maintenance costs on every mile of state highway in the USA besides!

On your car today, you pay about $38 a year in various motor taxes.

But . . . a small truck pays about $150 in taxes. A medium size truck will average from—$300 to $500. And the big truck units pay as much as $1,500 to $2,000 each!

Without those truck taxes—obviously—your family car would carry a much bigger tax load than it does now.

MULTIPLE SAVINGS

But—besides road building and maintenance—trucks save you money every mile they operate!

They save—because your food . . . clothes . . . and everything else you buy gets to its destination faster by truck. Motor freight is never side-tracked!

And because trucks pick up freight and deliver it without rehandling there's less spoilage—less damage in transit.

No other transportation system in the world can equal the over-all speed, flexibility, and economy of trucking.

Your basic living costs will drop still more as trucks carry more and more of the nation's freight. Trucks will help put better cuts of meat on your table—help you to buy better clothes—a more comfortable home—a newer radio—a bigger car. And you will be paying a smaller and smaller percentage than ever of total highway taxes.

Next time you meet a truck on the road, remember these things—remember what trucking is doing for you!

SHIP BY MOTOR FREIGHT—IT'S FASTER—EASIER—COSTS LESS!

Transport trucks carry freight from any point to any point—coast to coast. On many long hauls, motor freight is actually FASTER than the U. S. Mails! And schedules can be set to meet your own requirements.

Find out now why it pays to specify "SHIP BY MOTOR FREIGHT"!

Transport trucking is well managed—and one of the most highly-regulated of all industries. Uncle Sam's Interstate Commerce Commission regulates motor freight rates. Drivers must pass strict physical and mental examinations—conform to rigid safety rules. Trucks and all equipment must meet high government standards.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE have today inaugurated a President of the United States, with impressive ceremonies keyed to the traditional patriotic and religious principles of our democratic nation.

Our Presidential inaugurals have always been occasions for the expression of high faith in the destiny of the United States, of loyalty to its principles, and of reverence to God.

Today's inaugural has been conducted in full conformance with the American tradition.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt has stood before his people, as all American Presidents have done, and taken sacred oath to "faithfully execute the office of President of the United States and, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

All of our Presidents have taken this oath with keen mindfulness of its spiritual significance.

Probably all of them have been awed and humbled by the occasion of its taking.

Some of them have been inspired by it to expression of faith and principle in a manner to enrich unborn generations with living words.

Abraham Lincoln, leaving Springfield for his first inaugural, said:

"I go to assume a task more difficult than that which devolved upon Washington. Unless the great God who assisted him shall be with and aid me, I must fail; but if the same omniscient Mind and Almighty Arm that directed and protected him shall guide and support me, I shall not fail—I shall succeed. Let us all pray that the God of our fathers may not forsake us now."

Arriving in Washington, Mr. Lincoln realized civil war was inevitable, but even with this event in fateful prospect he had the faith to say:

"The mystic cord of memory, stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union, when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

MUCH EARLIER in our national history, Thomas Jefferson made his first inaugural an occasion for stating the basic principles of American life and government in words as immortal as those of Lincoln.

"Equal and exact justice to all men," he said, "of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political; peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations,—entangling alliances with none, the support of the State governments in all their rights, as the most competent administrations for our domestic concerns, and the surest bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies; the preservation of the general government in its whole constitutional vigor, as the sheet anchor of peace at home and safety abroad—freedom of religion; freedom of the press; freedom of person under the protection of the habeas corpus; and trial by juries impartially selected—these principles form the bright constellation which has gone before us, and guided our steps through an age of revolution and reformation."

BEAUTIFUL WORDS, wise words, full of faith and devotion and love of country, have come from the lips of our Presidents in their inaugural messages.

They all rise to great patriotic and spiritual heights at the moment of entry upon the difficult tasks of the Presidency, and are imbued by the occasion with understanding and appreciation of the source of their powers.

The American Presidential inaugural is a precious and priceless institution.

It gives us more than fine words.

It gives us men who are sincere in heart as well as word, and more than once has turned ambitious men back from the tempting paths of power and politics to the finer arts of freedom, prosperity and peace.

The God of our American fathers has never failed our Presidents and our people.

Let us hope and pray, as Lincoln did, that God will not forsake us now.

STOCKHOLDERS find it inconvenient to attend annual meetings, so big business is going to do the next best thing, that is take meetings to stockholders.

New England has been selected as the scene for this new innovation in the world of finance. President Lewis H. Brown of Johns-Manville Corporation announced today that a stockholders meeting will be held in Hartford, Ct., on Jan. 28. All stockholders of the concern, who reside in this area, have been invited to attend.

Such an idea might be tried out by other corporations as a means of showing stockholders that business is being run for the greatest good of all the people.

He kissed me—and I know 'twas wrong,
For he was neither kith nor kin.
Need one do penance very long
For such a tiny little sin?

But, after all, I'm not to blame,
He took the kiss! I do think men
Are quite without a sense of shame!
I wonder when he'll come again.
—Anon.

ABOVE sent in by one who is a grandmother, and is about to become a great-grandmother. "These are two verses from a favorite poem of my girlhood," says she. "It always reminds me of my first kiss. Of course, in those days a kiss by the garden gate meant something."

ALMOST CONFIDENTIAL: Speaking of the preponderance of fellows named Bill Smith, I see the glamour girl comic, Ethel Merman, married one. Which should prove when love walks in there's nothing in a name. Do you think you came in possession of a better name when you married, ma'am? . . . Alice Faye is putting some of her money into roadside dining car restaurants. I know a fellow in Connecticut who made a fortune with a lunch wagon because of a specialty he had. What do you think this specialty was? So help me, it was cold poached egg sandwiches . . . Maybe I'll raise cranberries on my ranch. Restrain your sneers, sir. There's money in cranberries now. From them comes something called ursolic acid that sells for eight dollars an ounce. However, I can't say I know how many cranberries it takes to make an ounce of ursolic acid.

ALICE FAYE TRIES NEW VENTURE

PASSING BY: Joe Benjamin, ex-lightweight, now a follower of the thoroughbred race horses, was a boon companion of J. Harrison Dempsey, when latter was champion. "Can you imagine this guy Benjamin," Dempsey once told me. "We go on a hunting trip in Utah. He doesn't like hunting; gets lonesome for the bright lights. Wakes up screaming one night; says he has a toothache and must go to the nearest dentist. He takes the car and doesn't come back. I have to start walking back to Salt Lake. I try to thumb a ride. Nobody gives me a tumble. 'Hey, I'm Jack Dempsey, the world's champion,' I yell at one fellow. He puts his fedora hat on sideways and shouts back: 'Glad to meet you, pal, I'm Napoleon,' and drives on." Benjamin who was present during the telling of this story, interrupted to say: "The funny part of it was I never had a toothache in my life." The Manassa Mauler growled: "Some sense of humor, what?" You should hear Dempsey and Benjamin tell about their trip to Europe. For laughs Mark Twain's "Innocents Abroad" is just not in it with that.

AM AGAINST drafting bachelors first. Young married men with no children and whose wives can support themselves should take their turn for military service on same basis as single men.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt -:- MY DAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—There is no doubt about it that a time like this brings one a great variety of ideas. Friday morning in New York City, a young woman came to see me with a plan which I think very good. She wants to offer her knowledge and experience to commercial and government agencies in the hope that women may be trained for ground aviation work as well as men. She thinks they should also learn to handle the insides of trucks and automobiles.

Many women are as mechanically-minded as men, and sometimes their hands are even easier to train. While it may not seem necessary at the moment to use them in these fields, it may become so and there is no reason why we should not be prepared.

In the afternoon, I attended a very interesting exhibition of El Greco paintings at the Knoedler galleries. Some of these canvasses have never been shown in this country before, and are now lent for the benefit of the Greek War Relief Association. I was enormously grateful to the gentleman who prepared the very beautiful catalogue and who accompanied me from picture to picture, explaining their meanings and the changes in the artist's technique.

ONE THING he says is very interesting, namely, that the hands in these paintings were carefully done to express certain ideas and feelings. This was so because, while expressions of the face may be controlled, the hands never lie. I have always liked to watch people's hands and have always thought them expressive of character. This corroboration of my feeling by a great artist was interesting.

In the late afternoon I heard the stories of some young men who are anxious to obtain mechanical training. All of them have been through our high schools in New York city. One of them remarked that, while he had expressed an interest in mechanics, his teachers had discouraged him. So, finally, he took an academic course with the idea that he might go to college, though he never had any real plan for the accomplishment of this hope.

He is now obliged to support himself and to obtain training at the same time, a situation which I fear faces many of our 18-year-old boys and girls. I sometimes wonder if the people who frame our educational policies might not profit by some frank and free interchange of thought with the younger generation a few months out of school.

Broadway Medley

GERTRUDE LAWRENCE IN INTRICATE PLAY

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK, Jan. 20—Moss Hart phoned Gertrude Lawrence the other night to learn whether she was well enough to appear in the dress rehearsal of "Lady in the Dark." Dick Aldrich, Miss Lawrence's husband, assured the author that she was too ill and could not appear . . . "Well, this is something which should make Gertie leap out of her sick bed," said Moss. "Tell her that, for the dress rehearsal, I'LL play her role" . . . And so Moss Hart mounted the stage, and read Gertrude Lawrence lines. In one scene of this, the most technically-involved play which ever has come to Broadway, the theater is darkened, and four revolving stages are set in motion. The stage manager took the bewildered playwright's hand, and guided him to safety, to avoid his being crushed by the whirling sets . . "God!" shrieked the author, "who'd be crazy enough to write something like this?"

MUSIC DEPT.: Tuesday night Milton Berle waited outside the Shubert Theater, for the curtain to ring down on the Al Jolson show . . . At 11:30, the impatient Berle entered the theater, and waited in the rear of the orchestra—while Jolson remained onstage, in the finale during which he sings all the old songs requested by the audience . . . At 11:45, Berle could restrain himself no longer. He walked down the aisle, told the orchestra conductor: "Wait a moment." Then he looked up at Joyce Mathews, and asked: "Coming?" . . . "Berle," Jolson ordered, "get backstage, and wait for her there. The show isn't over yet." And so Berle left, and went backstage.

LOCAL NEWS: Wendell Willkie's two favorites for the post of national chairman of the Republican party are Wherry, of Nebraska, and ex-Gov. Baldwin, of Connecticut . . . Otto Tolischus, who won the Pulitzer Prize for his coverage of Berlin, has been assigned to Tokio . . . The new movie short about London, "Christmas Under Fire," will be shown by Warner Bros. to all members of Congress next week, in the Dept. of Interior's auditorium . . . Judge Sam Leibowitz who, as a defense lawyer, saved more men from the electric chair than any other lawyer in the history of the bar, will preside at his first murder trial next week. It will be a Murder, Inc., case.

REALTY DEPT.. Victor Mature, the Hollywood star who refused a number of lucrative film assignments in favor of a role in "Lady in the Dark," was assigned to his new dressing room at the Alvin Theater . . . "Any time you think you're a star," Danny Kaye told him, taking Mature to the new quarters being prepared for Gertrude Lawrence, "take a look at this place and learn what stardom means" . . . Three large dressing rooms have been dismantled and made into one large room for Miss Lawrence. The quarters include a special bedroom, in case she should decide to remain at the theater overnight . . . The theater-owners did this for Miss Lawrence, because she opened the Alvin Theater in "Treasure Gal," and this is her first time back.

POETRY DEPT.: The 93-year-old August Heckscher took a train to Florida, and arrived there without any discomfiture. He immediately began to write a poem—this one. "The wars in the world are creating distress . . . They show us how hollow is all we profess . . . What to believe now's our daily task . . . And, incidentally, which editor to ask."

RADIO DEPT.: The Columbia Broadcasting System decided to enlarge its foreign news service by including the Orient. William Dunn was assigned to go to Japan and assemble a staff there, so that its nightly foreign news round-up would feature broadcasts from Tokio, as well as from London, Berlin and Rome . . . Dunn flew to California, then took a ship to Honolulu, and then a plane to the Orient . . . He arrived in Tokio and assembled his staff of American newsmen. On the next day the Propaganda Ministry announced that henceforth all press conferences will be conducted only in the Japanese language.

THEATER DEPT.: At the premiere of the John O'Hara show, "Pal Joey"—which opened the same night as "Meet the People"—Dance Director Robert Alton was too nervous to attend . . . "Let's go across the street," his aide suggested, "and meet the 'Meet the People' people."

BOSTON After DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

MONDAY MUSINGS: The joy of seeing an old friend make good again awaits those who knew Helen Kane when the poor kid was the Bonny Baker of her day . . . Helen's "day" was not so long ago . . . It was only one Presidential ago . . . Miss Kane, like Bonnie Baker, had a "freak" voice

BUT SHE WAS AT A GREATER disadvantage than Miss Baker . . . Helen's baby-talk was believable baby-talk, and many imitated her . . . Only several have tried to imitate the Baker girl . . . The absolute folly of being an echo of anything as fantastic as that wispy peep Miss Baker tremulously releases in "Oh, Johnny, Oh," dissuades what Helen had—a horde of imitators.

WHEREAS TO IMITATE Miss Baker, the prime requisite is to own a voice arrested in infancy. To imitate Miss Kane a girl singer needed only to be able to pronounce "boop-boop-a-doop" and to act coy . . . Consequently, "original boop-boop-a-doop girls" were thicker than refugees in Hollywood.

BUT HELEN WAS IT—the "original boop-poop-a-doop girl" . . . And notwithstanding Frank Cronin's best ad-writing on behalf of Lou Walters' "Latin Quarter" (where Miss Kane opened last night) it was not the song "I Wanna Be Loved By You" which projected Miss Kane to fame and glory

WE ARE EXPLAINING this because "I Wanna Be Loved By You" was spattered with two-and four-bar rests, inserted deliberately in the number to permit Miss Kane to get in her "boop-boop-a-doops." . . . The number was written expressly for Helen in a fabulous show which featured "moving scenery" and was named "Good Boy."

HAD MISS KANE'S INTRODUCTION of her cute little trick of interrupting the regular lyrics with the "boop-boop-a-doop" business begun with "I Wanna Be Loved By You," then her song-writers, the veterans Harry Ruby and Bert Kalmar, would have been entitled to share credit for originating the trick . . . They had nothing to do with it . . . Helen thought up the catch-phrase, which was to become a national scourge, out of her own cute little head.

AS A MATTER OF FACT, MISS KANE was an accredited hit of sizable proportions before Arthur Hammerstein signed her for "Good Boy," . . . She had broken a record at the Paramount Theater as one of the double features (the other being a so-so picture and that was why she was signed for "Good Boy" . . . Helen "stopped the show" in "Good Boy" . . . And then—as often will happen to playwrights, actors, composers and even producers—the Kane career thenceforth became one long anti-climax.

THAT IS WHY IT IS so pleasing to report that Miss Kane is at her very best at the Latin Quarter . . . Charming to gaze upon, Miss Kane looks like a college kid and her voice is no less attractive than it was when her income soared to high brackets

SHE SINGS SPECIAL MATERIAL at the Latin Quarter . . . Her best number (we think) is a tune entitled "On the Wrong Side of the Tracks," and the

HELEN KANE

She hits the (top) spot

composer is another Helen—Helen Pope, Miss Kane's accompanist at the piano

THESE AND OTHER tunes in Helen's repertory, we feel sure you will enjoy tremendously . . . But this reporter's most unalloyed delight grew from a new trick of Miss Kane's which, we are sad to say, can never hope to rival the general use to which her catch-phrase "boop-boop-a-doop" was put . . . Throughout the ten or twelve minutes Helen appears in full sight of an audience, not once does she fool with, fiddle with, tamper with, paw over, hang onto or adjust—or even touch—the microphone . . . Most singers used it as (a) an object of their affections, (b) a crutch.

TALLULAH BEST BET FOR WARNER FILM

By Louella O. Parsons

Tallulah Bankhead

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 20 (INS)—Before Jack Warner's bad cold sent him home he was discussing the possibilities of Tallulah Bankhead doing "Mrs. Skeffington" for him. Warners have been trying to find a Mrs. Skeffington since Bette Davis suggested Ruth Chatterton since she did not feel she could play the role herself. With Tallulah here—at the end of the run of her successful play, "The Little Foxes," she seemed to have dropped straight from heaven.

I never could see Tallulah, fine actress though she is, as Scarlett O'Hara, but I do think she'd be wonderful as Mrs. Skeffington, for she is a [illegible] and age requirements are [illegible] and age.

DANIELLE DARRIEUX

When Pat Weaver was on hand to act as the agent he didn't worry about it. He could make her look as old or as young as the role requires. La Davis I am told said she couldn't feel like a woman of fifty and therefore didn't want that part.

WHEN DANIELLE DARRIEUX was in Hollywood she couldn't wait to get back to France. She gave out interviews saying she hoped she would never see Hollywood again. She meant it, too, for she never renewed her contract with Universal Suspension since she was cast a bit in The Rage of Paris. Universal tried everything—even threatened suit—but no Darrieux, but Paris. She liked it so well she stayed there until the Germans took possession. Now she's making pictures for the Nazis. This news comes straight from her husband Henri Decoin, director, who also couldn't wait to shake the dust of Hollywood from his heels.

I STUMBLED on an interesting bit of news. I had thought there was very little doing on the United Artists lot but I find that Sam Spiegal has rented space and is about to produce "Tails of New York" (that's their title—not mine), a picture on the order of "If I Had a Million." In other words, Spiegal's movie will be directed by a number of megaphoners each one furnishing a sequence about the adventures of a dress suit. Mr. Spiegal confirmed the report that the story is in the fire but said he is still negotiating for talent and directors and the yarn itself is not yet complete.

I HAVE SEEN many brides in my time but never a prettier one than Brenda Joyce, who married Owen Ward, Saturday. She looked like a flower when she marched down the aisle at St. Alban's Church. Her dress, designed by Travis Banton, was white organdie with Betty, her real name, appliqued on one side of the full skirt and Owen's on the other with a dove holding tiny ribbons joining the two names. Instead of the traditional wedding veil she wore a straw bonnet with blue ribbons, with a knee-length veil. She carried Binnie Barnes' handkerchief for something "borrowed." Elgar's "Salute to Love" instead of the conventional Lohengrin's "Wedding March" and Grieg's "Bridal Procession" for the "Recessional" instead of Mendelssohn's march were played.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: Carole Landis, who does get around if I do say so, is now concentrating on Cedric Gibbons; Ellen Drew is back from Palm Springs with the first sun-tan of the season; Bill Conselman, Jr., is spending all his free moments with Jacqueline Dalya, singer at Charlie Foy's Supper Club; Howard Hawks at the House of Murphy with Nancy Gross, the girl he will wed when his divorce becomes final; the Eddie Arnolds celebrating their 12th wedding anniversary at the Cocoanut Grove; Robert Ruskin leaves for New York to arrange for the release of "Meet John Doe;" Dian Manners and John (radio tenor) Clark have set Valentine's Day for their wedding; Pat Dane and Al Vanderbilt are seeing each other seven days a week; Ethel Butterworth, formerly married to the inimitable Charlie, has adopted a baby; Teddy Hayes, who is now a biggie in the Roosevelt Administration, in town greeting old friends; those who claim to know the inside, say that it isn't Lana Turner that Artie Shaw is interested in—but Betty Asher; Venita Varden, who has been so terribly ill, making her first public appearance with Jack Oakie at Ciro's; the Herbert Marshalls and Sir Cedric Hardwicke seemed to be having an awfully good time at the same place.

TOMMY MAREN'S NEW BEACHCOMBER REVUE TOPS

Blinstrub's Village Holds Richard Tyrol

By SAM BERENSON

A sparkling new revue sways into the colorful Beachcomber this evening, where Tom Maren plays host at one of the greatest shows he has yet presented at this amazing bacardi salon.

A saucy bit of entertainment, indeed . . . with top-billing to Tanya, that lovely and exotic lady whose slow Island rhythm makes her as exciting a personality as can be found along the Rialto . . . and offering further zest and balance to this gay revue in the capable team of Jay Dorn and Stephanie Yosley.

It's purty little Helen Kane, stage and motion picture star, who comes boop-boop-a-dooping into the Latin Quarter this evening, to steal starry billing in a gay continental revue . . . a capable artist, this little lady, and was unquestionably the most imitated girl in the theatrical world when her "boop boop a doop" nonsense swept across the nation like the current grippe epidemic. She will always be associated with the song "I Want To Be Loved By You." Miss Kane is lovelier and in better voice than ever and is one of the most interesting personalities to appear in any night club this season.

That sophisticated dance stylist, Della Carroll, continues to provide a mighty tempting attraction at the smart Versailles . . . this famed danseuse brings a glistening reputation to town, and her polished performances are definitely applause-worthy . . . also on the week's gay bill at the Versailles are the Robins Brothers and Margie and others . . . plus a baker's dozen of lovely dancing gals . . . the George McFarland crew for the jive stuff . . . theatrical night every Sunday . . . A colorful revue moves into the Cocoanut Grove come sundown, wherein Spencer & Forneman are spotlighted in a return engagement; purty young Patricia causes a bit of eye-popping with her legerdemain; and the graceful ballroom dancers, Artini & Consuelo, blend their talents in a bang-up floor offering . . . a smart, thrill-packed entertainment dish

Entertainment in the sparkling manner continues on at South Boston's Blinstrub's Village, where once again the stay-up-set will find all that variety talent that has brought so definite a success to this atmospheric spot . . . Richard Tyrol, stage and screen singer, is held over . . . A wealth of nimble floor attractions, all cast in the gay continental setting which so many of the p. m. clique have come to appreciate . . . Plus, to be sure, the Karl Rhode music for your dancing pleasure . . . Manager Jack Fisher of the famed Cave phones us this a. m. that his show this week is one of the best ever seen in this city . . . Tamara Doriva, enchanting singer here, is undoubtedly the town's most charming La in-American importation this season .

Glenn Miller has just signed on the Modernaires . . . this slick quartet was previously with Whiteman . . . Nice goings-on at Steuben's Vienna Room, where capable entertainers and the Lew Conrad rhythm rate a merry round of applause . . . an oasis meriting your attention . . . And down No. Easton way, Cappy's huma through its thriving evenings . . . lots of action, lots of fun . . . which is why Cappy's remains a popular yearthrough spot . . . Our cross-country dept.: Count Basie plays Toronto with his band on Thursday . . . and a few days later has a date at the Two-Spot Club, Jacksonville, Fla. . . . Dorgan's an attractive rendezvous . . . Plenty of gaiety and a cuisine of sea-food dishes that are in themselves worth your presence . . . Jot this down.

Sally Keith continues to jam ye olde Crawford House so high that probably it's high-jumping manager, Allen Schwartz, is the only one able to cross the floor . . . Sally's tassle-twirling still remains a mighty competent bit of razzle-dazzlery . . . make a notation of this rotation . . . Alpini's a merry oasis among the after-dark set . . . a smart little spot placing emphasis on good food and good (Eddie Watson) music . . . and finding that it definitely attracts . . . Ella "Tisket" Fitzgerald at Brunswick Terrace Room starting Tuesday . . . Ella will feature her newest ditty—"Muffin Man."

Bossman Joe Wagenbach of the Lawrence Hofbrau presents this week one of the outstanding hits of the season . . . the show is one that should be on your "must" list . . . Jack Char of the Ruby Foo staff informs us that The Den may open for afternoon business . . . Ribby's Cafe, opposite the Allston depot, is one of the bright spots outside of Boston . . . Fun galore here . . . 5 Kewpies (a ton of fun) at the Broadway Gardens in Raynham.

Belle Baker still remains our favorite singer of songs . . . those heart-stirring melodies are styled in a manner duplicated by no one else . . . and this may account for the way the stay-up-set is jamming the Club Mayfair, where Belle's every appearance brings thunderous applause . . . a recommended rendezvous . . . Belle stays on until her Tuesday show, then the Mayfair presents still another starry entertainer, George Givot—the "Greek Ambassador," ever an ace attraction . . . Flash! The inmate band at San Quentin Prison has been upped to 50 pieces . . . still no out-of-town dates, however . . . An excellent entertainment dish for the week at Jack Brown's sprightly tempo'd Casa Manana . . . a slick, streamlined revue, a gay blend of color and talent, produced by Lee Steele, and the warm Casa hospitality makes this rendezvous a likely calling-place . . . the Lou Carter rhythm .

A bright success was the opening of Harry Drake's Blue Room at the Hotel Westminster . . . the big-time policy here will undoubtedly prove mighty popular, for Harry is offering excellent talent and a glamorous revue sprinkled with amazingly purty gals . . . the Jimmie McHale music . . . Ruth Wallis, lovely piano-beating chanteuse from Manhattan's supper clubs, comes to the Bradford's Circus Room on Wednesday . . . Elwin Shaw, magician, and nimble guitarist Will Cassi are other ace attractions.

"I wuz thinkin'...."

by Izzy Ort

Well—here I am back home from a week spent anklin' up and down the Boulevard of Broken Dreams—that's Broadway.

It was a good week. First, my boy, Mike Kaplan, the welterweight, dusted off Tony Ferrara last Tuesday like a champion. He hit the Broadway bopper so many times the black and blue spots made him look like a poppy seed roll. Speakin' of rolls, I added a few greenbacks to mine by some judicious bettin' on Mike. I also saw the Armstrong-Zivic fuss and the way Zivic fought I know Mike Kaplan can wrap him up anytime.

I wuz all over the town lookin' for new talent for my Grill and the El Tropico Room. I even rode the Hoboken ferry to listen to an accordion player. I saw a few musical shows to see if there wuz anybody worth bringin' back to town and I finally wound up with some terrific entertainers and if you shake off the slippers now and dash down to my Grill you'll get a good peek at them.

With business on the upswing, there's more action and more people in my place than in a navy yard! There's music and fun in every corner. Rudy Bauer, a gay figure in his evenin' suit, sings a hundred songs a night. Chick Harris' Gentlemen of Swing are always swingin' and so are my front doors.

Give yourself a treat and hop down here tonight. Anybody in Boston can tell you where my place is and everybody knows that the best time in town is at my Grill and in the El Tropico Room at 25 Essex Street in midtown. Advt.

'Gone With Wind,' Back After Year, Breaking Records

EVENING AMERICAN, MONDAY, JANUARY 20, 1941

Spectacle Proves Its Merit At State, Orpheum Houses

By PEGGY DOYLE

David O. Selznick's bad-boy-meets-bad-girl picture is back again breaking records at Loew's twin theaters.

And that after a year of road-showing, during which approximately 25 million people saw it and it piled up the biggest gross in the movie industry's history—$28,000,000!

Vivien Leigh

Currently it is being shown at popular prices at the State and Orpheum theaters, where it will continue "as long as it makes money."

Records for admissions were broken at both houses Saturday, opening day, and yesterday.

At the Orpheum, House Manager Howard Burkhardt's occupational eavesdropping kept his ears fucnsia-colored with pleasure. Again and again, he vows, he heard departing women patrons reveal that this had been the third, fourth or fifth time they had seen the picture and assert that 'I'm certainly seeing it again.' Mr. Burkhardt looks forward to a long and successful association.

Again, he would like to remind both those who have not seen "Gone With The Wind" as well as those who will see it again that nothing has been cut but the prices for his second engagement of the film version of 1936's best-seller, which has now been translated into 16 foreign languages and has sold around two million copies.

More fun on "Gone":

It won more Academy awards than any two pictures in history . . . for acting, Vivien Leigh; for direction, Victor Fleming; for best screen play, Sidney Howard, and so on.

It is common knowledge that wherever it has played in the United States it has broken the record of the theater by an overwhelming margin. Outside the United States, in the midst of bombings and blackouts, it played over 84 days at London's Empire Theater and was simultaneously played at the Ritz and the Palace.

The story of the world premiere in Atlanta on Dec. 15, 1939, was world gossip. All had read how one million people crowded into Atlanta, whose population is 300,000, on that day of days and saw in the flesh the dashing Rhett Butler (Clark Gable); the heartless beauty, Scarlett O'Hara (Vivien Leigh); the gentle, forgiving Melanie (Olivia De Havilland) and other fabulous folk of the book come to life in the persons of many of Hollywood's most gifted performers.

HURST FILM DEBUT SET

A group of Hollywood stars, Universal Pictures executives and 150 film critics from newspapers all over the United States, will converge in Miami, Florida, on Feb. 1, for a week of parties, parades and banquets in celebration of the world premiere of Fannie Hurst's "Back Street," starring Charles Boyer and Margaret Sullavan.

The premiere, which will climax the week of gaiety, will be held on the evening of Feb. 4, at the Lincoln theater, Miami Beach, Florida.

500 Journalists Guests at 'Life With Father'

Five hundred newspapermen and women from 70-odd New England newspapers will be the guests of Producer Oscar Serlin at tonight's performance of Clarence Day's "Life With Father."

I DON'T care who is President of the United States? What difference does it make and what does it get me? What does it get me or a million other girls in the United States who sit in offices taking bad dictation and changing it into good English?

And what difference does it make to the rich who have millions?

You got to think about all those things. You got to remember them when you get into arguments about Jones versus Smith for Congress or about Roosevelt versus Willkie for "President of the United States," as Mr. Willkie says it.

As a matter of fact, there are times when I wish I had never heard of either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Willkie. Maybe I would be better off. I certainly would be better off if I hadn't gotten all worked up about which one of them would win.

One of them did win. But I didn't turn out so well. I tell you it doesn't pay to argue about politics or religion or nationalities because, though you may win your argument, you may often lose a friend.

How is Harry Billings, did you say? Why, I guess Harry's all right. He'll get along. Any "yes" man always gets along, if you don't crowd him too hard. You can't get sore at a man who always agrees with you on everything. I mean, most people can't. I can. I did.

BROKE ENGAGEMENT

I don't see Harry as much as I did. Oh, I see him in the office and we speak very kindly to each other. He is just as polite and thoughtful to me. If I make for the water cooler, he's there with a cup, drawing me a drink.

The other day, I was going through the door at Macy's and it got stuck. And who do you think unstuck it for me? Harry, of course. He looked handsome. The sun caught in his black hair and made it glint. His eyes were laughing, though very formal. And his mouth, the mouth I used to know so well—Damn Harry Billings!

No, we're not engaged any more. We broke our engagement. Which one did it? Say, aren't you the snoopy old thing? Neither—Well, look. I'll tell you about it. Good grief! If I don't tell somebody about it, I'll go crazy.

You remember the presidential election, don't you. Well, I do, too. But I wish I didn't. Wendell Lewis Willkie moved into a train and rode all over the country telling people that President Roosevelt wanted to be a dictator like Adolph Hitler and Benito Mussolini. That he wanted to get the United States into the war and have all our boys killed fighting the other dictators so he could win and be boss of the whole world.

BORN A "YESSER"

I never heard anything so ridiculous. Why should President Roosevelt have to call out an army with that voice of his? Why all he ever had to do was pull a microphone over to him and say, "My Friends," and tell what he wanted and Adolf or Benito would throw their arms out of joint giving it to him. Anybody would.

The Cast of Characters in "Politics"

HARRY, her fiance who favors the candidate from Elwood, Indiana.

But President Roosevelt's side was just as bad. They said Mr. Willkie was the tool of the Power Trust and that he was trying to throw all the poor out of PWA jobs and a man who talked as if his name might be Itches got on the air and attacked Mr. Willkie's character and I don't know what all.

You know, when you hear somebody calling somebody else names every time you turn on the radio, you just naturally take sides and begin calling a few yourself. The first thing I knew, I got all hot and bothered about re-electing President Roosevelt.

And, furthermore, I got to believing what this man Itches was saying about Mr. Willkie and every time I heard his name or heard him speak on the radio I'd say something back to him, just as if he was in the room with me.

Well, Harry was for Willkie. He was for Willkie but he never talked much about it. I never would have known it only one night I asked him who he was going to vote for and he told me.

Harry isn't the arguing kind. If you ask him what color coat is, he will answer, "black." But if you say, "No. It's white," he'll look at the coat and say, "Well, it looks black to me but maybe it IS white, just as you say."

And if you keep on insisting, he'll finally admit that there is a little streak of white in it and besides he guesses he's color blind. If there ever was anybody born to be a "yesser" it was Harry Billings.

MOVES SLOW

I had never given the matter a thought. If I did, I would have said to myself, Harry believes Mr. Willkie is the better man for President. I believe President Roosevelt ought to go in office. It really doesn't make any difference one way or the other. Neither one of us will get any raises in pay just because Mr. Willkie is elected or President Roosevelt is re-elected.

Harry and I had been going together for two years. If it was any other man but him, we would have been married by now, but Harry moves awfully slow and a girl can't forget her sex and do all the passing.

But one night, I had been listening to this Mr. Itches when Harry rang the apartment bell. I shut off the radio and went and opened the door.

"Hello, Agnes," he said apologetically and walked in. "It's swell out tonight. There's a good picture at the Alhambra. Get your hat and coat."

I looked at him. I looked at his black hair and his nice eyes and his sweet mouth. I wanted to feel it against mine. I stood there looking up at him, stood right in his way so he couldn't move. He began to smile uncertainly and I began to get sore. "Aren't you going to kiss me?" I snapped.

KISSED ME GENTLY

He looked past me over my head. He looked at me and a light began to shine in his eyes. He looked past me again and he said, "Is it safe?" Do you think anybody'll see us?". I shook my head. I put my face up and he put his arms around me and kissed me gently. "Oh, Agnes," he whispered after a minute, "you're sweet. You're beautiful. I like to feel you in my arms."

I said, "Let's not go to the movies for a while. Mom and Dad are out Let's sit and talk."

He just sat there in a big chair, looking at me and smiling that little smile of his. I looked at him and I tried to tell him with my eyes that I wanted more kisses. But he was dumb and kind of scared.

I began to burn up. Was he a man or a mouse? I said, "I think President Roosevelt should be re-elected. This man Willkie is a tool of the Power Trust. He's a dictator."

"Well, I don't know." Harry said weakly. "I kind of like him."

VOICES HER HATE

I remember all the nights like this one we had had together. So I started hammering at Mr. Willkie. I said awful things about him and Mr. McNary and every Republican I could thing of.

"All right," Harry would say. "That's the way you feel. I like Mr. Willkie. Get your hat and coat and come on to the movies."

But I wouldn't. I just sat there, voicing my hate for Mr. Willkie. What I was doing was blowing off steam because I was mad at myself for caring so much for Harry and mad at him for being so dumb.

But he didn't know that. So I just sat there and talked and I talked. Even went on to say that anybody who liked Mr. Willkie must have something wrong with them. I said I would not have anything to do with such a person. I certainly wouldn't marry him.

CALLED COMMON SCOLD

This went on and on. I could see Harry getting mad. He got madder and madder, and the madder he got, the more I talked. I talked myself into a state and by this time, I wanted him to tell me to shut up and when I didn't to slap me hard.

Honest! It was the queerest feeling. But he just sat there, like a lump on a log, and finally I said, "Either you promise me to vote for Mr. Roosevelt or get out. Here's your ring!"

He looked stupidly at the ring in his hand. He looked at me. He got up and took his hat. He started for the door. I yelled.

"Well, haven't you anything to say for yourself?"

"Yes," he said, "I'm glad this happened. You got me out of marrying a common scold. I'm glad you showed yourself in your true colors. Well, I got this to say. To hell with the Democrats. And to hell with the Republicans, and, furthermore, to hell with you, Agnes!"

So that's how Harry and I broke up. I've wished a thousand times I hadn't talked so much that night. I don't know what got into me. But wishing won't get me anywhere. It never does.

You Can Be Beautiful

Jelly Repairs Facial Creases

By ARLINE GOULD

IF YOU DISCOVER that the line from your temple to your chin seems out of focus . . . that it sags and shows crease-like wrinkles . . . and your forehead is so furrowed that one of the new "pure browed" hats is out of the question . . . you needn't feel that all is ashes and burlap, figuratively speaking.

Discover the preventive in time . . . a remarkable astringent jelly which is new in use and action!

Though it's been called "the invisible chin strap" it isn't a localized aid, as throat creams are . . . it is a contour repairer that may be used in a band-like area around your face . . . across the forehead, down the temples and around the jaw line . . . and finally, under and around the chin.

It is said to be superbly tightening and firming . . . giving the tissues a new strength and suppleness of line. The astringent jelly is an unscented, amber brown affair . . . and is to be patted in with decisive short movements that are firm but not sharp.

Take a small quantity of the astringent jelly on your fingertips . . . and pat it in . . . under the chin to the ear pat upward with the back of your hand. With the tips of the fingers, work it in the side of the face up through the temples, patting with the flat of the fingers. And with fingertip pads, go along the forehead, and along the lines which form beside the mouth.

For a night treatment, leave the jelly on as long as you can. In the morning, a quick routine is ended by wringing a towel in cool water, after five or ten minutes of patting, and removing all signs of the jelly. This is the way to preserving a really youthful contour!

If you would like information on this unusual "astringent jelly," phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days except Saturday, or write, care of the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

IF THE CONTOUR of your face no longer has the lovely, firm sweeping line that Anne Shirley's shows as she sits in the sun . . . it's time you considered the use of a highly unusual cosmetic, an astringent jelly which Arline Gould describes today . . . to firm forehead and mouth lines, and tighten outline contours.

How to Make a Footstool

Such an adorable little footstool with its gaily flowered covering and quaint old-fashioned air! Who'd ever guess that you could make it yourself, using two round breadboards as a base?

For the cover, choose a brightly patterned chintz or cretonne, in colors harmonizing with your other furnishings.

To make the stool itself, glue four small wooden blocks or ordinary spools between your breadboards and allow to dry thoroughly. Then, for legs, screw on four doorstops, as Diagram 1 shows. Stain or paint.

For padding the top, cut six circles of cotton batting, the largest the size of the breadboards and the others in graded sizes, each a half inch smaller than the last. Now place the smallest circle on the stool, add the next larger and so on as in Diagram 2.

Cover all with a piece of batting large enough to reach down to the bottom board and stretch over this a piece of muslin which you tack firmly to the lower breadboard.

And now to tack on your flowered covering, finishing with a crisp frill or perhaps a fluffy fringe. A band of upholsterer's braid gives the final touch.

You'll find full instruction for making many such decorative objects in our 40-page booklet, NEW IDEAS FOR HANDMADE GIFTS. Send 15c in coins for our booklet, NEW IDEAS FOR HANDMADE GIFTS, to Boston Evening American, Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y.

When Conventional Salads Irk, Try These New Dishes

By MARTHA LEE

A home cook is in a salad rut when she finds herself serving hearts of lettuce with French dressing, day after day.

Or perhaps it is lettuce and tomato, lettuce and cucumber, or some other ordinary combination. If she hunts around for new salads, especially seasonable ones, she'll bring new interest in the salad course to the members of her family—especially the males who, as a class, belittle salads.

Here's a salad that gives a crisp note to a baked bean supper—and it's good served with a juicy pork roast, too. Once it has been tasted and has received the approval of everybody, other ways of serving it are sure to crop up in the mind of the homemaker.

APPLE VEGETABLE SALAD

2 cups cubed unpeeled red or green apple
2 tbsp. cider vinegar
1 cup shredded raw carrot
3 stalks celery, chopped
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. sugar

Sprinkle apple with vinegar; add carrot, celery, salt and sugar, mixing well. Moisten slightly with mayonnaise. Arrange salad in lettuce cups and garnish with mayonnaise.

Jellied salads are becoming more popular each year. Women like them and they're even becoming popular with men who ignore salads altogether. Many combinations of fruits and vegetables lend themselves very well to this type of salad. We think you will like this recipe which combines beets, cabbage and green pepper:

BEET LUNCHEON SALAD

1 pkg. orange-flavored gelatin
1 pint hot water
3 tbsp. vinegar
1 tbsp. salt
1½ cups diced cooked beets
1½ cups shredded cabbage
¼ cup diced green pepper
½ tsp. scraped onion

Dissolve gelatin in hot water, vinegar and ½ teaspoon salt. Chill until slightly thickened. Season beets, cabbage and green pepper with ½ teaspoon salt; add onion. Fold into slightly thickened gelatin. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise and slices of hard-cooked egg or stuffed egg. Makes 8 servings.

And here's a cranberry combination that's delightful:

CREAM CHEESE AND CRANBERRY SALAD

1 pkg. orange-flavored gelatin
1 pint hot water
1-3 cup water
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. vinegar
2 cups cranberries, ground
1 pkg. (3 ounces) cream cheese

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add sugar, salt, and vinegar. Chill. When partially thickened, add cranberries. Mash cheese until creamy. Add gelatin-cranberry mixture gradually to cheese and beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Turn into ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce and garnish with chicory or escarole. Serve with French dressing or mayonnaise. Makes 6 servings.

JELLIED PEA AND CARROT SALAD

1 tbsp. unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
1 cup boiling water, or
1 cup boiling liquid in which either carrots or peas were cooked
1 cup cooked peas and cooked carrots, diced
1 tsp salt
Pepper and paprika
¼ cup vinegar or lemon juice

Soak gelatin in cold water and dissolve in hot water or hot vegetable liquid. Stir in remaining ingredients and pour into a wet mold. Serve when cold with mayonnaise or boiled dressing.

NOTE: Herbs are a distinct addition to this salad. Cook chopped fresh mint or a little dried mint in the hot liquid for a few moments.

Even the Court Takes Notice

Judge John V. Mahoney of the Suffolk Probate Court took "judicial notice" of the "I'm Going to Lose 20 Pounds" campaign being conducted by Boston Evening American staff writer Mary X. Sullivan.

It was during a recent divorce hearing. The woman seeking a divorce from her husband recited at great length the various acts of cruelty committed by her husband. At the end she said all these acts resulted in her losing between 15 and 20 pounds.

Judge Mahoney turned to the woman and asked:

"Haven't you been reading Mary X. Sullivan's story in the Boston Evening American? She is now trying to lose 20 pounds."

Ed. Note—Mary says: "I'll do it my way."

Mary X. Gains Half Pound

lieved to find that I weighed an even 126. The extra half-pound had sneaked back, but that was a bonus anyway.

That seems to prove my point, that you can eat and reduce, doesn't it? I'm not going to break down again on potatoes and pastry, I hope, but I am going to continue to eat breakfast, lunch and dinner . . and not just lettuce and such.

Just to reassure those who don't believe in starving, let me say again that I eat two slices . . . no more . . . of bread or toast, with butter, every day. Melba toast is fine, but to me some of those bread substitutes taste like dog biscuit.

Today I got more exercise than I have so far. The count was pushed up a little, and I finished up with some deep knee bends and leg-swinging on the horizontal bars. Tomorrow morning I go again, and I hope to report the loss of another pound.

Come on, you overweights, get started. Let me know how you like that knee-squeeze!

Tomorrow's story will tell you more about Mary's "campaign" for cutting her poundage. And if you have a surplus, start now and grow willowy with her as she progresses.

Fire Damages Brownie's Shop

Nine persons were driven to the street today by a $1500 fire in a four-story building in London st., East Boston, which started near the basement furnace.

Among those who vacated were workers in the office of Jacob Braff, paper dealer and noted L st. "Brownie," but the natator himself was not present at the time.

Occupants of the second floor apartment are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frank, parents of David Frank who, with his wife and daughter, occupy the third floor.

On the fourth floor are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ovala.

You Can Get a $25 LOAN for 2 Months for 94¢

REPAY IN 2 INSTALLMENTS OF $12.97

You can borrow $100 if you can pay back $6.41 a month

You can get a personal loan of $20 to $300 at Household Finance at rates substantially below the lawful maximum—if you can repay in equal monthly installments.

Payments to fit your purse

You may choose the most convenient repayment plan from the table below. Suppose that you need $100 and you can readily repay $6.41 a month. Your installments will repay a $100 loan in full in twelve months. Or, if you wish smaller payments, as low as $4.41 a month for twenty months will also repay a $100 loan.

See the sample loans and payment plans in the table. (Loans also made in other amounts and for other periods.) Payments in the table repay everything. Household's rate of 2½% per month on that part of the balance not exceeding $100, and 2% per month on that part of a balance in excess of $100 is less than the maximum permitted by the Small Loan Law and is the same to everyone.

Simple to borrow

We require no salary or wage assignment, no stocks or bonds. (Loans are made on furniture, car or your personal note.) No credit inquiries of friends or relatives. You don't have to ask friends or fellow-workers to sign the papers.

Two Minds With Ditto Thoughts

Carl Anderson's Popular Comic "Henry" on Page 8

Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

FRITZIE ZIVIC who removed any doubt about his right to be rated as the world's greatest welterweight when he stopped Hammering Henry Armstrong in twelve rounds, is a throw back to the old type of champion who can box as well as right.

After seeing Zivic demonstrate so decisively his superiority over Armstrong, I concluded that Fritzie had not been given proper rating as a boxer by the young men who cover ring shows. In the first Armstrong bout and in the Lew Jenkins tussle, it was pointed out that Zivic was a destructive fighting machine who liked to keep walking forward tossing punches. From these stories one might have got the idea that Zivic did not know much about boxing and that he relied chiefly upon his ruggedness and ability to hit to beat down the opposition.

I saw Zivic for the first time in his recent winning contest with Armstrong, and he showed me he is a perfect boxer as well as an aggressive fighter who can hit with either hand.

Zivic looked the part of the master boxer as he rated himself perfectly every second he was in the ring. He refused to get excited when Armstrong would bob and weave and cut loose with the full fury of his attack. Fritzie would wait patiently until Hammering Henry left the smallest opening, and he would then blaze forth with his best Sunday punch.

Zivic hits short and straight, and he tries to keep his blows inside of his rival's swings. In this way Zivic gets the greatest possible amount of power behind his smashes, while he also offsets swinging, looping punches such as Armstrong likes to deliver.

In the eleventh round when Armstrong made his last, desperate rally, Zivic was on the receiving end for most of the first two minutes of the round. True, he broke the force of many of the wallops, but he was hit frequently as the courageous Armstrong tried to turn the tide of conflict in his favor.

This was a real test for Zivic and he met it like a champion. He did not lose his poise for a single second, and kept shooting short blows to Armstrong's injured eyes. When Henry tired with a full minute of the round to go, Zivic increased his own speed. He swarmed all over Armstrong and gave the little colored boxer as sound a trouncing as any one challenger ever received.

Armstrong Was Great in Defeat

ARMSTRONG LOOKED impressive in defeat. His eleventh round rally will long live in the memories of those persons who saw it. The only way Henry could have won at this stage of the bout was by scoring a knockout. The former champion knew this as well as anyone as the blood was streaming from jagged cuts over his eyes. Armstrong knew it was 50 to 1 against him to land with a lethal punch that would enable him to regain his lost crown, but he gallantly made the big effort.

In the years to come when Armstrong sits at the ringside watching other champions and challengers battle, he can always feel that he made his most spectacular ring effort while trying to regain his lost championship. The 23,000 spectators who watched Armstrong's futile try will gladly be witnesses in his behalf.

It was pleasant to know that during his ring career Armstrong was wise enough to set aside a portion of the money he made with the power of his fists for the day when he could not fight any more. Under an annuity plan set up by Manager Eddie Meade, Armstrong will receive about $80 a week. In addition Hammering Henry has real estate holdings in sun kissed California. He is already talking of setting himself up as a wine merchant.

Armstrong was without the words of counsel and advice of Meade during what he says will be his last bout. Meade has been ill and his doctors did not even permit him to listen to the radio account of the match. Armstrong was back in his dressing room having his wounds treated when Meade was told of Zivic's victory.

Eddie's knowledge of boxing told him that Armstrong would have to battle against great odds, but he naturally hoped that the little fellow he had piloted to three world's championships would be able to overcome the obstacles in his path.

Armstrong Going Back for Almost a Year

WE DO NOT like to see our ring kings slip, but as a matter of truth Armstrong has been going back for most a year. Henry started on the downgrade following his gruelling ten-round bout with Ceferino Garcia in Los Angeles on last Washington's Birthday.

The official decision was a draw, but the bout took much out of Armstrong. Garcia outweighed Armstrong by almost ten pounds, and pounded Henry's arms with smashing blows. For his inches and weight Garcia rated as one of the best hitters of modern times.

After the bout, Armstrong went to Hot Springs, Ark., for a month's rest, and then came to Boston to train for Paul Junior at a Rip Valenti Goodwin Club show. Following the training sessions, Armstrong would visit a Back Bay doctor and took electrical massage treatment for his tired arms.

Paul Junior gave Armstrong a hard bout. After Armstrong scored a knockout, he sat in his dressing room at the Garden for an hour before he was able to leave.

There were then other bouts and finally the unexpected defeat by Zivic. The second Zivic win the other night was merely additional proof that Armstrong's amazing vitality had run its course, and that he was at the end of the fistic trail. If Zivic lives up to Armstrong's high ring traditions, he will prove himself a great champion.

BRUINS TIGHTEN RACE BY TIE WITH HAWKS

The hockey men who calmly remarked, "Let 'em go. It's a long season" when Toronto and Detroit cut out such a terrific pace early in the National Hockey League campaign, can sit back comfortably now and say, "I told you so."

The Maple Leafs and the Red Wings still are first and second in the league standing, but they're no longer far ahead of the rest. The Leafs have only a four-point margin over Detroit while only six points separate the Red Wings from the fifth-place Chicago Blackhawks.

Even the Montreal Canadiens aren't ready to be counted out yet with nearly half a season to go.

BRUINS START HOME

Toronto started out by winning 13 of its first 15 games. Since then the Leafs have turned in only four victories and two ties against six defeats. Detroit, badly crippled by injuries, has managed to keep its games close but hasn't won in the last six starts.

The Leafs couldn't hold out against the last-place New York Americans last night and got only a 3-3 tie after building up a 3-1 lead in the second period. And that reverse came after they had lost a 1-0 decision to the Boston Bruins Saturday. Detroit suffered a pair of 2-1 setbacks over the weekend, losing to the Canadiens at Montreal Saturday and to the New York Rangers at Detroit Sunday.

BRUINS TIE HAWKS

And as Boston went on to tie the Blackhawks, 4-4, at Chicago last night, the Wings' margin was cut to a single point over the

AMERICAN-RECORD ALL-ELEVEN HEARS JORDAN, M'KENNY

By MICHAEL GILLOOLY

Lloyd Jordan, head coach at Amherst College, and Joe McKenney, physical director of the Boston Schools, will be guest speakers at the Boston Evening American-Daily Record banquet to its All-Scholastic team tonight at the Hotel Lenox.

The affair, an exclusive gathering of the schoolboys and their guests, will get underway at 6 p. m.

It is the privilege of each of the eleven players to bring a friend. The boys may bring any one of their teammates, neighborhood chums, or any relative to the stag affair.

The board of coaches which picked the team will act as a reception committee, greeting each one of the boys personally

OFFICIAL TEAM

These eight high school mentors include Harry Downes, Brookline, Fred Ostergren, Arlington, Bill Broderick, Salem, George Kenneally, Revere, Jim Mansfield, Haverhill, Dennie Gildea, Everett, Ed 'Skip' Sherlock, Hyde Park and Bill Ohrenberger, Boston English.

These coaches spent long, quarrelsome hours selecting the team which is recognized everywhere as the official A'l-Scholastic eleven.

Bill Grimes, sports columnist, will be toast-master introducing the speakers of the evening. Although neither need any introduction to sports followers.

Jordan, a graduate of Pittsburgh, holds the athletic directorship at Amherst as well as the head coaching berth. He is recognized throughout New England as one of the smoothest after-dinner speakers in this section.

JOE MAY OPEN UP

McKenney, as a football player at Boston College under Major Frank Cavanaugh, was called one of the smartest quarterbacks in history by the late Major. McKenney returned to B. C. as a coach before taking over his present post in the Boston schools.

Joe was in on that famous 'fifth' down in the Dartmouth-Cornell game this past season as an official and may break out with an interesting angle on this game.

Special Event For Girl Skate Stars Under 12

Good news today for the little girl skaters of New England.

Because through the years the demand for a special championship race for little girls has been so insistent, the Silver Skates Derby editor today announces that there will be a Midget Derby event for girls under 12 years of age in the big Boston Garden Derby classic of Sunday, February 16.

This means that the feminine tots will have a race for themselves just like the boys under 12. Special prizes and medals will be available for these tiny youngsters and the editor feels that the girls' midget race will be the very best event on the entire program.

There are countless girls who would have entered the Derby in past years if such a race had been scheduled. But under the old order they would have had to skate against girls up to 15 years of age. Which we are the first to admit was not at all fair or to be expected.

Now we have the race and those girls under 12 who already had filed entry for the Derby will be placed in the new class, their entries already filed away as accepted. And the editor will be only too glad to receive the entries from every little girl in New England who would like to enjoy the fun of this annual competition.

In keeping with the ages of the youngsters, the girls' midget race, like the boys', will be very short in distance, not at all exacting nor tiring. It will be a one-lap event which should fill the bill nicely without overdoing. Every such youngster will get the finest protection and supervision.

Hockey Fans Egg Eddie Shore

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Jan. 20 (AP)—With the Eastern Division's top rung at stake the New Haven Eagles whipped the Springfield Indians, 2 to 0, in an American Hockey League contest slowed down by the constant bickering of owner-player Eddie Shore of the visitors.

Shore stopped the game for ten minutes in the third period to request additional police protection after a fan hit him in the neck with an egg. He also protested about the condition of the playing surface causing the start of the final period to be delayed five minutes.

IT'S A DATE!

Hockey Stars Help Fund

One of the most attractive amateur twin-bills of the current hockey season is on tap for Wednesday night at the Garden when the "97" Club, National Senior "B" champions of the AHA of the United States, oppose the defeated finalist, the crack Boston Jr. Olympics and the up-and-coming Boston Reds tackle the strong Mt. Hood Hockey Club of Melrose.

These games are part of the athletic contributions to the President's Infantile Paralysis Fund and the entire proceeds will be donated to that charity. The first contest will start at 7:30 sharp and local puck pecans who take in this bargain bill are assured of continuous action.

The '97" Club and the Jr. Olympics met four times last winter with the former college stars victorious each time. As yet this season the teams haven't met in a regulation game though they have engaged in an informal two period scrap. The "97" Club minus the veteran Johnny Garrison, have such aces as Austie Harding, former Harvard ace, Dave Rodd and Barnes of Yale on their squad this season.

Beetham Enters Half-Mile Event

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (INS) — Charley Beetham, national A. A. U. 800-meter champion mailed in his entry for the half-mile invitation race in the Millrose Games, Feb. 1.

Beetham, former Ohio State half-miler, has captured a victory in the Millrose Games only once in six starts. He intends to shake the jinx this year.

Dom DiMag Ready to Fly Here for Fete

This was Mail-Opening Day, or something, at Fenway Park, with Johnny Peacock, Woody Rich, Tom Carey, Dom DiMaggio and the maor of Sarasota all writing the Red Sox.

Catcher Peacock, Pitcher Rich and Infielder Carey sent signed contracts, bringing the number of those in the '41 fold to 12.

Peacock's note with the contract said he was "very much pleased with the generous" terms.

DiMaggio's letter to Phil Troy said he received his plane tickets and "weather permitting" will be in Boston the 28th for the Jan. 30 Baseball Writers' dinner.

The Sarasota mayor's note stated that extra care is being given the ballyard to have it in big league condition for the Feb. 23 arrival of the Hose.

NEW DEAL PROMISED RED SOX PITCHERS

By FRANK FENWAY

Come spring, no national magazine will feature the pugnacious features of Joe Cronin, manager of the Red Sox, shouting to the high heavens, "We Can Beat the Yanks."

For the national mags feature only headline attractions, and the Red Sox hardly rate in that category as ball and bat season approaches.

The boys who expert for a living have jumped on other bandwagons in their pre-season predictions, and the consensus would result in no higher than a fourth place ranking for Clan Cronin.

PYTLAK BIG HELP

Yet the team the Red Sox will field the first day "Play Ball" is shouted in 1941 has better potentialities than did the team that last season was supposed to take over the throne of the Yankees.

Instead of a potential star it has a sure fire one in Dom DiMaggio. It has Ted Williams and Jim Tabor safely by the second year hoodoo. And it has an established catcher in Frankie Pytlak.

But what it has mostly is the promise of Joe Cronin, that this year he will give his young pitchers a chance to go out on the mound and strut their stuff without fear of being wagged to the bench the minute the going gets tough.

In the opinion of the writer, Cronin's decision to stop tinkering with his pitchers during the course of a game is the most progressive measure the Red Sox have taken toward winning a pennant since Yawkey bought the club.

Cronin, of course, has never admitted his handling of pitchers has been faulty. And in fairness, there has been on way of judging whether or not it was lack of ability or his juggling which resulted in their miserable showing.

But too many youngsters who looked good starting ou have folded under Joe's management to say the blame was theirs entirely.

SEVEN FAILURES

Young fellows like Dickman, Harris, Bagby, Rich, Wagner, Hash and Butland, who pitched great minor league ball and looked like 20-game winners in spring training, have yet to click in big league competition.

There are those among them who say the fault was Cronin's and that if they had been allowed to pitch regularly, and remain in once they started, they would have been winning pitchers.

Now, says Joe, he's going to give them exactly that chance. These youngsters are going to be sent out to pitch and win, or take their licking until the bitter end.

If they fail now, Cronin's contention that they never did have the stuff to be consistent winners will be justified.

Personally, methinks two or three of them bid fair to cross up their b...

Detroit K. O. King to Star In All-America Bouts Here

DETROIT, Jan. 20—He really doesn't look the part, but he is being called a "Killer." And so the National All-America Tournament at Boston is coming up with another future "Great."

CHUCKLIN' CHARLIE—Here's the victory smile of Charlie Hayes, Detroit amateur fighter who will appear in the National All-America championships in the Garden a week from tonight. Hayes, a terrific puncher, has an impressive record but the local boys are confident they can wipe the smile from Charlie's face.

His name is Charlie Hayes—a fighting warrior destined to follow in a great line of standout Detroit amateur fighters. He comes behind Joe Louis, Edgar and Edwin Waling, Al Nettlow, Dave Clark, Patsy and Jimmy Urso and Bill Eddy.

If Hayes, now a middleweight, didn't really love boxing he would not be in the All-America tournament. He would probably be a basketball star instead.

NATURAL ATHLETE

A natural athlete, Hayes was a promising basketball player before he took up boxing. He soon discovered he'd have to make a choice between those sports. Finally he went to Leo Jones, boxing instructor of Chevrolet A. A. He had made up his mind.

"I prefer boxing," he explained. "It's the game I enjoy most, and it's the one in which I want to participate."

Jones took him in hand, and since then he has done very well in his chosen pastime. He has won 63 of his 66 scraps as an amateur. He was voted the most promising novice in 1939, and last winter was runner-up to James Edgar in the open welterweight bracket of the Diamond Belt.

His brightest feat was his victory over Joe Maxin, the reigning National A. A. U. middleweight champion in Cleveland a few months ago. It was Maxin's first setback in 102 bouts and established Hayes as one of the country's greatest amateur fighters.

In a few weeks Hayes will be graduated from Lincoln High School in Ferndale a Detroit suburb, and he thinks a national championship would be the finest graduation present he could want. He means to get it, too.

CONN TO STUFF SELF INTO HEAVY THRONE

MIAMI, Fla. Jan. 20 (AP)—Billy Conn, a big blond boy who's determined to get much bigger, started a two-month "second helpings" campaign here today.

Conn said he would attempt to eat his way to the heavyweight boxing crown while staying at the Normandy Isle home of Promoter Mike Jacobs. The Pittsburgh boxer and Jacobs arrived yesterday and Conn immediately started getting in a little preliminary work at the dinner table.

HE'LL EAT, EAT, EAT

With a leg of cold turkey in one hand and a glass of milk in the other, he outlined his plans.

"I'm going to eat all I possibly can and in between meals I'll just lie around in the sun," Conn declared.

He said he doesn't expect to take any exercise, but instead will "rest up and take things easy."

"I'll gain some more weight and then I'll jab that Joe Louis dizzy," he continued. "I'll make him so dizzy that he'll think he's on a merry-go-round."

NEEDS 10 POUNDS

Conn explained that he hoped to push his ring weight up to the 187-pound mark adn then take on Louis late next summer.

He weighs 183 now but admits that his ring weight probably would be about 178. That means he must gain at least 10 pounds if he is to reach his goal.

Conn's eating campaign, which he started in earnest today, made it virtually certain he does not intend to defend his light heavyweight championship.

Adams Leading Jockey Race

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 20 (AP)—Johnny Adams, who tied a Santa Anita Park record with five victories Saturday, is leading the jockey race with 17 triumphs for the season.

Nearest competitors of the pair are Basil James with 11 winners in 73 starts and Johnny Longden

Tom Moon Stars As Pics Win

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (AP)—The Boston Olympics hung up a 5-4 victory over the New York Rovers in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League game today at Madison Square Garden before 12,556 fans.

Tom Moon, substitute Boston goalie replacing the injured Vic Polich, prevented the Red Shirts from tieing the score in the last five seconds by neatly turning aside Frankie Parker's penalty shot.

The shot was awarded New York when one of the Boston players had laid down in the crease to help Moon ward off a scoring threat.

The Olympics cut loose in the opening period and led, 3-0, at the end of the stanza.

In the second period the Pics made it 4-0 before the Rovers scored their first goal.

Trailing 5-3 going into the last period the Rovers staged a great rally with Parker adding the final marker.

The Junior Olympics of Boston blanked the Jamaica Hawks, 5-0, in a Metropolitan amateur league game, while in another league game played this morning, the Manhattan Arrows upset Sandspoint Tigers, 5-3.

3 OLD MEN OUTRACING YOUTH

Three "old men" of foot racing—Gene Venzke, Joe McCluskey and Luigi Beccali—are promising to bring some youthful enthusiasm into this season's indoor track meets that may annoy the younger runners no end, according to the Associated Press.

Their ability has been proved over a stretch of a dozen years or more. Many of their contemporaries have retired and these three near the age when they might be expected to sit back and watch their successors try for the prizes.

McCluskey, who seems to have been winning distance races forever, admits he's 29 years old; Venzke is 32 and Beccali, 33, won the Olympic 1500 meter title in 1932. Still the "old men" are out there breaking records.

They had the benefit of the springy midget auto racing track at the New York Coliseum Saturday when Venzke and McCluskey each broke a Metropolitan A. A. U. indoor meet record and Beccali tied the mile mark. Nearly everyone who won a race over that track also did it in record time.

Still their performances and the fields they beat indicate they'll be near the front at Boston's Prout Memorial meet next Saturday and the Millrose A. A. games in New York Feb. 1.

Venzke, a top-flight runner for 16 seasons, ran off with the 1000 yards Saturday in 2:14.2 and Beccali, never considered any great shakes as an indoor runner, tied the mile mark of 4:16.6 set last year by Andy Neidnig of Manhattan. Neidnig ran second in a close finish.

Both of them are entered for the Prout mile next Saturday to face John Munski, Chuck Fenske and Walter Mehl, considered the "big three" among the younger milers, and Mel Trutt, the Indiana graduate.

McCluskey's contribution to the Metropolitan record busting was a 14:34 three-mile run in which he lapped his field.

And when it comes to the old fellows, don't forget Eddie Gordon, former Olympic broad jump champion from Iowa. In his 18th year of competition he leaped 22 feet 6 inches to win the meet title in his specialty for the fourth time.

Four for Wilson

Dave Wilson, premier handicapper for the GREEN RACE SPECIAL of the Boston Evening American, came up with a banner day at Hialeah Park, Saturday, scoring with four winners, three of them in a row.

Dave Wilson

In the opening heat, a three-furlong dash, Treemontier came from behind to annex top honors and return $3.70 on the front end.

The fourth found Bay Carse getting home first for a payoff of $7.10. War Bugle took control of matters in the fifth, getting up to win for a payoff of $3.60.

Along came the feature, loaded with the top-flight sprinters at the track. Wilson's figures put Beau James on top and he was right, with the Calumet colorbearer winning for a $10.60 return and Dave's third straight winner.

From opening day at Florida, Wilson has been leading his contemporaries a merry chase, coming up with plenty of winners, including some very excellent prices.

$4000 Draft Price For Hockey Players

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 (AP)—An American Ass'n committee asked the National Hockey League for a one-year extension of the five-year agreement which governs the relations between the two leagues.

The two leagues agreed on a draft price of $4000 for players taken from the association by the National. Higgins said that until a new agreement is signed, the two leagues would conduct business under the rules of the old agreement.

Bruins. Following the game the Bruins started for Boston to tackle the Rangers tomorrow night.

RANGERS IN FOURTH PLACE

The Rangers took fourth place from Chicago by the same margin when they gained their first victory on Detroit's Olympic rink since February, 1933. Superior man power did it for them. With only 13 players on hand, the Wings led, 1-0, going into the third period, but Phil Watson quickly tied the count and Mac Colville pushed the winning goal through a weakening defense.

Big Chuck Conacher, who played his best hockey in a Toronto uniform, carried the Americans to a draw with his old team. He couldn't score with his terrific shots from right wing but they made the openings for Murray Armstrong, Lorne Carr and Harvey Jackson to push in the Americans' goals.

Two of them came in the final period after Sweeney Schriner, ex-American, Gordon Drillon and Lex Chisholm had given Toronto a 3-1 lead.

JACKSON, CONACHER SCORE

Art Jackson and Roy Conacher, younger brothers of the Americans' veterans, did all the scoring for Boston, which failed to hold a 4-2 lead. Each scored in the first period only to have Art Wiebe and Doug Bentley tie the score in two minutes.

In the second Conacher and Jackson repeated and this time the lead lasted until late in the third frame. George Allen and Phil Hergesheimer finally broke through the tight Boston defense to bring the final deadlock.

McLaughry Head Speaker At Medford

A sell-out is in promise for the testimonial dinner to be tendered the Medford High School team next Wednesday night at the high school gymnasium in celebration of the Mystics first victory over Malden since 1928.

Gold footballs will be presented to the members of the squad and five cups will go to individuals for outstanding play on the gridiron last fall.

Timothy Feeny, in charge of the committee, has arranged a grand evening's entertainment. Guest speakers include Tuss McLaughry, former Brown coach recently appointed to the Dartmouth berth, Al McCoy, Colby coach and Joe McKenney, physical director of the Boston schools.

Moving pictures of the Brown-Army, All Stars-Giants, Colby-Bowdoin and B. C.-Tennessee Sugar Bowl games will be shown.

Orioles Rally To Beat Seagulls

BALTIMORE, Jan. 20 (AP)—The Baltimore Orioles scored two goals in the third period to defeat the Atlantic City Seagulls 4 to 2 in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League game.

For the first two periods, the Gulls matched goals with the locals and they went into the final period with the score tied 2-2.

Webster put the Orioles ahead with a goal at 14:20 and Vitarelli added another 36 seconds before the game ended.

RYDER HOPEFUL B. C. SQUAD WILL HIT STRIDE

Boston College had a national championship football team during the season and post season just recently closed.

At the present time the John "Snooks" Kelley coached hockey team is sporting a seven straight win record and will probably finish the season rated the best in the East.

As much, however, can not be said for the Jack Ryder tutored track squad. Recently at the V. F. W. games at the Garden the trackster—with the possible exception of Sophomore Gil Walker—showed absolutely nothing.

The one and two mile relay teams both went down to humiliating defeats. The frosh one-mile relay team didn't do any better. Only Sophomore Walker showed something to enthuse about. Everett Gil was second to Floyd of Brown in the final of New England Intercollegiate Championship 50-yard dash event.

Co-Capts. Joe Shea and Bill Dowd are the respective anchormen of the two-mile relay team and one-mile relay team. Both are ideal anchormen but in the V. F. W. meet their "up-front" support was completely negative.

SHEA HEADED FOR POINT

For a while it appeared that Boston College might lose Co-Capt. Shea. A Waterbury, Ct., youth, slim Joe was the recipient of a congressional appointment to the U. S. Military Academy at West Point.

Co-Capt. Shea was honored by Congressman J. Joseph Smith of Connecticut.

The appointment, however, doesn't call for Joe's entrance to the Point until June.

The Ryder squad, however, isn't discouraged because of its recent shaming. Venerable Jack, one of the nation's oldest and most famous track coaches, attributes his team's misfortunes to poor physical condition.

"Many of the boys worked during the Christmas holidays," Coach Ryder was saying as he stood on the outdoor track at the Heights practice. "They didn't practice at all during the holidays and couldn't regain their condition during the five day school week which precede the V. F. W. meet. They aren't as bad as they looked last Saturday night—not by a long shot. The boys will improve with practice. I expect them to do much better in the K. of C. meet."

COUNTS ON WALKER

Coach Ryder was talking about his relay teams when he referred to "they." The Eagle coach is most enthusiastic about his Co-Capt. Dowd, a Jamaica Plain youth, and his Gil Walker, a chunky little Negro speedster who gave up football to concentrate on track.

Walker, who as a freshman last season was a sensation even when competing against the cream of the country's dash men, is not in the pink of condition.

The layoff from track which came by Christmas employment, saw the Everett boy add about 10 extra pounds. He weighs about 170 at the present time and until he sheds about 10 of those younds he won't be in top shape.

Bill Riley (Dorchester), Ed McCarthy (Medford), and Johnny Ballantine (Roslindale) with Co-Capt. Dowd composed the mile relay team at the V. F. W. meet. Johnny O'Connor of South Boston may oust one of the first three named during next week's time trials.

Fred Seely (Hyde Park), Dick Carey (Natick) and Dick Buckley (Beverly) were Co-Capt. Shea's companions in the two mile competition. Elmer Ross, president of the senior class, may gain a place on the two mile team at the expense of one of its previous members during the coming week.

Among the freshman the best of the lot appears to be Jim Kelleher, a Lawrence lad. Kelleher was a grippe victim earlier in the season and only now is regaining his condition.

HINGHAM STRING BROKEN

The Hingham high basketball aggregation was advancing with lengthy strides, with five straight wins under its belt until it met Weymouth the latter part of last week. Weymouth knocked Hingham from its pedestal with a barrage of well timed baskets.

The thrill game of the South Shore basketball week was the Hingham-Rockland affair. With 23 seconds left to play, and Hingham trailing by one point, Paul Dunphy, brilliant Hingham forward, turned to the Rockland basket and let the winning shot go.

Bill Erwin's Braintree high quintet is definitely on the up-grade. It picked up a duet of verdicts this past week, the first from Jack Gannon's Weymouth hoopsters, and the second from highly touted Stoughton, undefeated in five starts. Jim Connoly and Tom Huleatt were sinking them from all angles for the Erwins in the conquest of Weymouth.

Coach Harry Arlanson, grid mentor at Weymouth high, upon receiving the Class C championship at the Hotel Lenox the other evening, was at a loss to determine whether it was a step up or down. Arlanson master-minded Weymouth high to the Class B title in 1936.

What the advance press notices termed as a brother act, in reality turned out to be a family massacre, in the battle between East Bridgewater and Abington. Joe Morey's "Easties" charges rolled up a 19 point win marg in over Brother Dick's hapless Abington contingent.

The grippe-riddled Quincy hoop squad after having its mid-week battle with North Quincy postponed because of the flu, trekked to Brockton on the weekend only to have its colors trampled in the boards by the Shoe City lads.

The battle of two of the foremost South Shore rivals, Randolph and Holbrook, turned out to be a walk away for Coach Dan Leavitt's Randolph tsalwarts.

Sam Long's talented Thayer Academy hockey team is destined to go places in the South Shore loop with such shining lights as Paul McKusker, Lew Baily and others.
